6 ARE BURNED AS RICHMAN'S YACHT IS SUNK

Actor, Mark Hellinger and Ziegfeld Chorus Girls Blast Victims.

SHOES BLOWN OFF EVERYONE ABOARD

Greenport, N. Y., July 26 (A.P.).—Harry Richman, Broadway actor and night club owner; his chauffeur, a ship captain, a newspaper columnist and two Ziegfeld Follies chorus girls were burned severely today in an explosion which sank Richman's yacht at its dock here.

The most seriously injured was Helen Walsh, one of the actresses. As fire tore through the cabin she was buried under a flaming mattress. Richman seized her and jumped with her into the water. Both were later helped to shore. Physicians said her condition was serious but not critical.

The other victims are:

Mark Hellinger, newspaper columnist, burned severely on the hands, legs and chest.

Virginia Biddle, Ziegfeld Follies chorus girl, severe burns on the feet and ankles.

Robert Levy, Richman's chauffeur, superficial burns.

Samuel White, the ship's captain, burns on the face, chest and head.

Gladys Glad Hysterical.

Mrs. Mark Hellinger, known in the Follies as Gladys Glad, was the only member of the party uninjured, but she likewise was taken to a hospital suffering from hysteria.

Hellinger and Richman said gas fumes in the cabin in which the group were sitting exploded and fire sprang up so quickly all were burned before they could flee.

The 36-foot sea-going cruiser, the Chevalier II, was bought two weeks ago by Richman from Alexander Aaron, Broadway producer, for a reported price of $4,500.

After insuring the craft yesterday, Richman invited the Hellingers and the two chorus girls to go deep-sea fishing today.

They left Beachhurst, Long Island, at 2:30 a. m., and tied up at an oil company dock here at 9:30 a. m. Nearly 150 gallons of high-test gasoline was put aboard and White was hired to pilot the Chevalier out to a point off Green Hill, where Richman and Hellinger planned to fish.

The three actresses, Levy and Richman were in the cabin, White had just stepped aboard and Hellinger was preparing to cast off at 11 a. m. when the blast occurred.

Blazing Girl Rescued.

Flames, which shot out from the cabin, enveloped White. He was blown 10 feet back on the dock by the force of the explosion.

The shoes of all six on board had been blown off. Fire was sweeping the cabin. Hellinger, on deck, was surrounded by flames, his clothes were burning, his left arm had been burned and his hair had been singed.

Ripping off his burning suit, he made for the cabin. A flaming mattress lay on the floor. Hellinger threw it through an open hatch and discovered it had been covering Miss Walsh, whose clothing was afire.

Hellinger was about to pick up the girl when Richman grabbed her and jumped with her in his arms into the water. Levy meanwhile was leading Miss Biddle and Mrs. Hellinger over the roof of the cabin to the dock.

The columnist and spectators who had gathered on the dock helped Richman and Miss Walsh from the water.

Although physicians said later Mrs. Hellinger had not been burned in the slightest, she ran screaming up and down the dock and was carried to an ambulance. She, Richman, Levy, Hellinger, Miss Walsh and Miss Biddle were all taken to the Eastern Long Island Hospital. Physicians attended White at his home.

Internal Injuries Feared.

Miss Walsh's hair was nearly all burned away and physicians said she probably would have permanent scars on her right hand. They did not believe Richman's burns serious enough to interfere with his theatrical work.

Richman, who frequently has been seen in leading musical comedy roles both on the stage and screen, once was reported engaged to Clara Bow, movie actress. He now is appearing in the Follies.

A $250,000 breach of promise suit, filed against Richman a year ago by Camille Bessant, known as Flo Stanley, Mack Sennett bathing beauty, is scheduled for hearing tomorrow in Supreme Court here. Reports have been current that Miss Bessant would drop the action and a release be entered by her counsel.

DAVIS CUP RETAINED BY FRENCH NET TEAM

Cochet Defeats Perry in Deciding Singles After Borotra Loses.

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER.

Auteuil, France, July 26 (A.P.).—In a last-minute blaze of glory, France today won the Davis Cup for the fifth consecutive year. She beat back a determined bid by Great Britain in the challenge round, three matches to two, to assert once more her world tennis superiority.

It was the uncanny tennis brains of little Henri Cochet which kept the cup—more bowl than cup—from crossing the English Channel. In the first of the final two singles matches, Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, of Britain, had whipped the fading Basque veteran, Jean Borotra, 7—5, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5, and brought the series count to two-all. That left the issue squarely up to Cochet.

Far off his usual form in his two previous cup matches and beaten earlier in the season by two lesser players, Cochet did what 10,000 wildly excited tennis fans expected of him and beat the biz Briton, Frederick J. Perry, in the deciding match, 6—4, 1—6, 9—7, 6—3.

France thus for the fourth successive year successfully defended the cup it won from the United States at Germantown in 1927.

The Cochet-Perry match was an excellent finishing touch for the world's hard court team classic. An anxious sporting crowd filled Roland Garros Stadium to see Perry battle the world's No. 1 player. Lines formed before the gate to the stadium as early as 8 o'clock this morning, some fans standing there for 2½ hours before reaching the ticket window, and several thousand disappointed tennis followers were turned away.

Froom noon until Austin and Borotra went on the court at 2:15, the stadium was a lunch box. Girls, men and boys came with bottles of beer under one arm and sandwiches of hard-crusted bread under the other.

Borotra again today was only a shadow of the man who used to fight "Big Bill" Tilden. At the start, it seemed the Basque had learned something from his defeat by Perry on Friday and was going to play a less strenuous game in order to conserve his strength. But before the second game of the opening set was over it was evident the friendly Frenchman still was fatigued from the pounding Perry gave him. Austin had but to return a reasonable number of balls and the match was his.

Rain began falling soon after Austin served the first ball. Before the afternoon had ended, it had made the court as slippery as a December football field.

With the score at 2-all, Young Perry galloped into the inclosed square seemingly unmindful of the Treasury Bill Issue To Total $60,000,000

(Associated Press.)

Acting Secretary Mills yesterday invited tenders for $60,000,000 in 91 day Treasury bills to be sold to the highest bidder the afternoon of July 30.

The bills, which will be dated August 3, and mature November 2, will be redeemed at face value at the end of the 91 days. The money received for the bills will be used to retire $60,000,000 in Treasury bills which fall due on August 3.

CANAL ACROSS NICARAGUA IS HELD FEASIBLE

Col. Sultan, Back From Survey, Says Trade Will Need It.

$700,000,000 IS GIVEN AS ESTIMATED COST

Army Engineer Asserts Proposed Route Would Not Be in Quake Danger Zone.

A canal across Nicaragua is entirely feasible from an engineering point of view, and could be constructed for $700,000,000, Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, of the Army Engineer Corps, said yesterday upon his return with an expedition sent out to survey the possibilities of the plan.

Col. Sultan is a member of a commission appointed by President Hoover in 1929 to investigate the feasibility of a canal across Nicaragua, which would augment the Panama Canal. He was named to head an expedition of 25 officers and 275 men from the Regular Army, which surveyed the proposed route of the waterway. He returned to Washington yesterday after two years in Nicaragua.

There is apparently little need for a Nicaraguan canal at the present time, Col. Sultan declared, but he pointed out that trade experts and economists all had made guesses on the expansion of use of Panama Canal, and in all cases they have been wrong.

Time May Be Far Off.

Commerce will probably expand so greatly that a new canal will become a necessity, in the opinion of Col. Sultan, and the canal will undoubtedly be built, but he admits that this will be quite a while in the future.

"There is a limit to the traffic the Panama Canal can bear," he declared, "because of lack of water. It could be expanded to allow, perhaps, three sets of locks and ship lanes in parallel, but eventually a limit will be reached because its reservoir of water is a definite and limited thing. Of course, the canal has not nearly reached its capacity, and it may be years before it does, but when this time comes a second canal will be needed."

A Nicaraguan canal would save two days on the trips of 80 per cent of the shipping which now uses the Panama Canal, according to Col. Sultan.

Longer Than Panama.

As far as the engineering problem in building a new canal is concerned, he said, the new ocean connection would be 173 miles long, as compared to 50 miles for the Panama Canal, and three locks at each end would be necessary, reaching a summit of 105 feet, where the locks at Panama reach a summit of only 85 feet.

On the other hand, Col. Sultan says there would be no place where engineers would be troubled with slides as they were at Panama, and there would be no single point where it would be necessary to make as deep a cut as the workers did at Culebra.

But perhaps the best point in favor of the Nicaraguan project is the unlimited supply of water. The canal

Autogiro Hits Cars; 1 Dead, 2 Are Hurt

Pilot, Passengers Escape as Machine Crashes Parking Row.

Alameda, Calif., July 26 (U.P.).—An autogiro plane crashed into a row of parked automobiles near the San Francisco Bay airdrome tonight, killing a woman and injuring several other persons.

Mrs. Nellie Boucher, who was seated in one of the automobiles, died while being taken to the Alameda Sanitarium. Her daughter, Shirley, 4, and Louis Courtis, were injured critically.

Three automobiles were wrecked. One of them was torn to pieces by the big rotor on top of the autogiro and the propeller, which was driven by a 320-horsepower motor. The pilot of the autogiro apparently misjudged his distance from the flying field when he came down. The aviator and two passengers with him escaped injury.

GRAF QUITS RUSSIA ON TRIP TO ARCTIC

Zeppelin Leaves Leningrad on Six-Day Tour to Study Pole Travel Route.

Friederichshafen, Germany, (Monday) July 27 (A.P.).—The Zeppelin works received a wireless report from the Graf Zeppelin just before midnight giving her position as 68 degrees north latitude; longitude 43 east. This located the ship a considerable distance north of Archangel, near the Arctic Circle.

Leningrad, Russia, July 26 (A.P.). Carrying Russian, German and American scientists, the Graf Zeppelin set out today for a six-day voyage of exploration and scientific study in the Far North.

The dirigible took off from Leningrad at 11:10 a. m. (4:10 a. m., Eastern standard time).

Taking off in the face of unfavorable atmospheric conditions, the big dirigible lifted her nose from the special mooring mast a little more than fourteen hours after her arrival here from Berlin to take on hydrogen from a special storage tank erected for her.

Although the actual time of departure was uncertain, many thousands gathered at the mooring ground to witness the departure of the airship. She was given a rousing sendoff as she slowly nosed into the air.

During the night the ship took in 9,000 meters of gas.

Just before the start, Dr. Hugo Eckener, her commander, said he was leaving for the North fully confident of success and hoped to reach Franz Joseph Land within 24 hours, unless hindered by the weather, which, according to the latest reports, was not quite favorable.

When in the neighborhood of Franz Joseph Land, Dr. Eckener added, the Graf Zeppelin will try to establish immediate contact with the Soviet ice-breaker Maligin.

The Maligin already is in the vicinity of Franz Joseph Land and has been informed by the wireless station on Rooker Island that the entrance to the bay is free of ice.

The third Arctic dirigible expedition in history carried 12 scientists, a photographer, two journalists and a Russian wireless operator, besides a regular crew of 30.

The American members of the expedition are Lieut. Comdr. E. H. Smith, of the United States Coast Guard, and Lincoln Ellsworth, sportsman and explorer.

PENAL SYSTEM HIT AS FAILURE BY CRIME BODY

Wickersham Group Files Report With Hoover After Long Quiz.

BRUTAL DISCIPLINARY MEASURES ASSAILED

Overcrowding, Insanitation, Parole Methods Scored; Suggests Changes.

(Associated Press.)

The American penal system was adjudged a flat failure yesterday by the Wickersham Commission.

Reporting directly to President Hoover, the commission scored the use of brutal disciplinary measures and asserted conditions in many of the 3,000 institutions of the system were "almost incredible." It told of men who, for offenses as slight as talking or laughing, were shackled to doors for twelve hours a day, tied down under a stream of cold water, whipped, placed in strait-jackets, confined in wire cages so small they could not move, or kept in complete darkness for days on end on a ration of 4 ounces of bread every 24 hours.

"The prison has failed as a disciplinary institution," the report said. "The riots, the fire, the use of cruel and brutal measures of punishment, the persistent recurrence of murder within the prison, the presence of * * * narcotics, the frequent atmosphere of hate and bitterness, are sufficient evidence.

Has Failed in Education.

"The prison has failed as an educational institution. No one claims that the men who are released are better equipped to accept an honest role in the world than they were before commitment.

"The prison has failed as a business enterprise. With few exceptions our prison system is a costly and dependent institution. We spend on the average $350 each year for the maintenance of each individual prisoner in our penal institutions."

The commission asserted it was convinced "a new type of penal institution must be developed." It outlined a plan of its own, under which only a few prisoners would be kept in heavily barred and guarded buildings.

Prisoners would receive wages. Those with contagious diseases, the insane and drug addicts would be segregated. Education would be stressed and wardens would be men who could be classed as "the president of a great educational institution."

Prison as Last Resort.

The parole system would be developed "as the best means yet devised for releasing prisoners from confinement." No man would be sent to prison until it was "definitely determined that he was not a fit subject for probation."

Nevertheless, the commission criticized the present parole sytem as so undermanned, overworked and illequipped that it had produced small results. In eighteen States, it said, contact was made with parolees by correspondence alone, making it "easy to beat the game."

"The whole paper system becomes a huge joke," the commission said, "and parole comes to be nothing more than a speedy manner of emptying prison cells. This is unfortunately the case in the majority of the American States today."

The commission devoted much of its report, which, with the addition of a report by an advisory committee of 24 experts, totalled 343 pages, to a

Truck Kills Girl as Rites For Brother Are Planned

Death Strikes Twice Within 48 Hours in Laurel Family; Boy Drowned in Patuxent Will Be Buried With Sister.

For the second time in less than 48 hours tragedy has stalked the household of Sam Leisure, at Laurel, Md.

On the eve of the burial of his 7-year-old stepson, Ellsworth Barnes, who was drowned Friday night while swimming near the old cotton mill dam at Laurel, friends yesterday afternoon came to the Leisure home bringing word of the death of the boy's sister, Ethel Barnes, 9 years old, who was instantly killed when she ran into the path of a huge truck at Burtonsville, Md.

Still dazed from the shock of Ellsworth's death, the grief-stricken family gathered last night at its home to learn the details of the second tragedy.

Ethel, the friends said, went to the Burtonsville store yesterday afternoon to make a purchase. With the article she bought clutched in her hands, the child ran from the store. For a moment she stood on the porch talking with a friend. Then, without looking either way along the busy highway, crowded with Sunday motorists, she started to run across the road.

Her friend screamed. Several men shouted and ran toward the highway. Ethel, suddenly realizing that the shouts were meant as a warning to her, looked up to find she was in the path of an on-coming truck.

Frightened the child attempted to turn back. But it was too late. The truck struck her, despite efforts of the driver to avoid the accident. The child's body was thrown several feet by the impact.

Rushing to her side, witnesses hurried the girl to a nearby doctor. First aid efforts proved futile. The physician said she was killed instantly.

According to Maryland State police the truck was operated by Albert Nicholson, of Burtonsville. The accident was termed unavoidable.

Plans to bury Ellsworth today were cancelled. He died early Saturday morning in the Patuxent River. Members of the Laurel and Bladensburg rescue squads worked over him for five hours in an effort to induce respiration.

The family of the two children said last night that they would be buried together tomorrow afternoon in the Laurel Cemetery.

Relief for the stricken family, which is in destitute circumstances, was provided yesterday by members of Holy Name Societies of Washington. At a quarterly meeting in St Mary's Church, Laurel, Md., the Rev. Joseph A. Myer told delegates of the plight of the family and $131 was collected for aid.

Gov. Murray Tells 'Army' To Permit Bridge Traffic

Durant, Okla., July 26 (A.P.).—Oklahoma's militant governor, W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, late today bowed to a Federal court injunction, and ordered national guardsmen at the scene of the Red River Bridge "war" to permit travel to pass over the Durant-Denison, Tex., toll bridge, without interference.

Gov. Murray, carrying a long horse pistol in his valise, hurried to the Oklahoma approach of the bridge last night after announcing he would "hold the fort" with national guardsmen against any efforts to enforce an injunction issued yesterday at Muskogee by Federal Judge Colin C. Neblett.

The injunction directed that those responsible cease interference with traffic over the bridge. In ordering removal of a barricade at the approach to the bridge, the governor said the toll structure would be left open as long as a parallel free structure, thrown open yesterday, was not closed to traffic.

Another angle to the controversy was added today when Representative Tom McKeown, of Ada, Okla., told the State executive that he would seek a congressional investigation of the use of Federal injunctions to prevent use of free bridges over the Red River. McKeown described some provisions of Judge Neblett's order as "preposterous."

Tonight, despite the lifting of the toll bridge barricade, no one had paid the necessary 75 cents to use the structure.

In issuing orders for the removal of the obstruction the governor said

Crowds Comb Capital In Search for Ibanez

March to U. S. Embassy, But Fail to Find Him; Flight Rumored.

Santiago, Chile, July 26 (A.P.).—Secrecy early today as to the whereabouts of the resigning President of Chile, Carlos Ibanez, resulted in a rumor which started later in the morning, to the effect that Ibanez had fled from the palace in an ambulance disguised as a wounded soldier and had gone to the American Embassy.

A crowd formed quickly and marched to the embassy, about a mile from

IBANEZ LOSES POWER AS REBELLION LOOMS

Opazo, Leader of Senate, to Administer Affairs Until Elections.

Santiago, Chile, July 26 (A.P.). The Chilean Chamber of Deputies tonight rejected the request of former President Carlos Ibanez for permission to leave the country and demanded his prosecution.

Santiago, Chile, July 26 (A.P.).—President Carlos Ibanez Del Campo, Chilean dictator and self-styled "man of destiny," fell from power today by his own hand.

In the face of an incipient civilian revolution, the man who once said semipublicly that he enjoyed "divine guidance in ruling as he thought necessary," and who took for his own the principal precepts of Premier Mussolini of Italy and former Dictator Primo De Rivera of Spain, turned in his resignation today.

The resignation was verbal in form. It was made as a request to the Chilean Congress for safe conduct out of the country.

The resignation was promptly accepted by the Congress, which formally declared Pedro Opazo, president of the Chilean Senate, vice president of Chile and acting president.

The president's resignation has been demanded for a week. It was expected today or tomorrow, but it came with a dramatic suddenness just as a populer uprising of the masses was being organized in the form of a general strike.

Many Killed, Many Injured.

It followed upon three days and nights of rioting in the streets, during which between 60 and 100 persons were killed, and about 2,000 injured.

Senor Opazo announced after being sworn in at a joint session of the congress that "true constitutional government will be initiated, with full personal freedom." He said he would administer the affairs of the country until elections can be held.

Esteban Montero, minister of the interior in the cabinet of former Premier Blanquier, which lasted eight days, was chosen by Senor Opazo to form a cabinet in which former Premier Blanquier will be minister of finance.

Senor Opazo, as president of the Liberal party, enjoys the friendship of most political groups.

Discussed Plan With Advisers.

Former President Ibanez began to step down late last night. Behind the thick and well-guarded wall of the Palace of Moneda, he discussed his plans with advisers, and at 4 a. m. today he made his decision to resign.

The decision was kept secret from every one except a few persons until the leaders of the Congress could be summoned during the morning.

At noon the fact that he had resigned became generally known. The first plan was to form a junta with Arturo Alessandri, former president, as its head but that was given up for the scheme which was followed.

Under the Chilean constitution, the minister of interior becomes acting president in the event of the resignation or death of the president. However, it is provided that if there is no cabinet the place falls to the president of the senate.

Froedden Also Out.

It was arranged that Carlos Froedden, premier and minister of interior in the last Ibanez cabinet, should resign first with the cabinet before the president was permitted to resign, thus assuring the ejection from power of Senor Froedden also.

Once he had resigned, the former president's safety immediately became the pressing problem. Opposition leaders desired to protect him from mobs. Later in the day he wrote out his request for permission to leave the country, making the former verbal request formal.

As soon as this written request was in hand Senor Opazo issued a manifesto to the country and Senor Montero began to organize a cabinet.

STIMSON, SACKETT GUESTS OF CURTIUS

Bruening Is Also Present as Problems of Nations Are Discussed.

Berlin, July 26 (A.P.).—On the terrace of a picturesque restaurant overlooking the Wansee, popular lake playground of Berlin, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett, of the United States, were luncheon guests today of Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening also was a guest, and the four talked quietly and earnestly about questions vitally affecting the future of Germany and Europe.

Precisely what they discussed, and how they discussed it, was not revealed in the communique issued by the foreign office in connection with the luncheon. Nevertheless, great importance was attached in diplomatic circles to this informal and intimate conversation betwen the German and American statesmen, an importance which also attached to the hours they spent elsewhere during the day.

Secretary Stimson was quite specific yesterday in insisting that his

2 Seriously Hurt As Airplane Falls

Pilot, Slightly Injured, Says Ship Struck Air Pocket.

Haverhill, Mass., July 26 (U.P.).—Two men were seriously injured when a barnstorming airplane in which they were flying crashed to the ground from an altitude of about 200 feet near here today. The pilot of the plane suffered minor hurts.

Those injured were Arthur Caswell, 65, and Ralph B. Lawton, 31, both of this city. They were taken to Gale Hospital, where Lawton's condition was reported grave.

George Broome, of Boston, pilot, told authorities the plane struck an air pocket after taking off from Haverhill airport and went into a spin. The accident occurred a short distance from the Massachusetts-New Hampshire State line.

RIOTS FOLLOW SHOT AIMED AT GOVERNOR

Four Mexican Churches Are Scorched by Fire After Three Priests Die.

Jalapa, State of Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 26 (A.P.).—A young man, who attempted to assassinate Gov. Adalberto Tejeda, was in a hospital today and many mob leaders were in jail after a night of rioting in this state capital in which four of the principal churches were damaged by fire.

In the City of Vera Cruz, two priests, Father Dario Acosta, 22, and Father Alberto Landa, 23, were killed in a raid on the Asuncion Church while imparting religious instruction to a congregation of children last evening.

Immediately after he had been wounded by a shot in one ear, Gov. Tejeda declared from a balcony of the government palace here: "Despite this campaign of terrorism, I will carry out my plan."

The governor had warned that unless the Catholic Church complied with the new state religious law limiting the number of priests in the State of Vera Cruz he would take measures to enforce it.

Eyewitnesses of the attempted assassination of the governor yesterday said his assailant was shot down after a pistol fight which lasted 15 minutes, in which the governor and his assailant shot at each other from behind pillars at the entrance to the government palace. The assailant, in a serious condition in the hospital, refused to divulge his name.

After the attack on the governor, a mob formed and obtaining gasoline at automobile filling stations, advanced against the churches. Pouring gasoline on the walls, they set fire to the buildings.

The cathedral and the churches of Calvario, Beaterio and San Jose were damaged before the fire was extinguished by police and troops. Several persons were injured when part of the San Jose church collapsed. Police broke up the mob and made many arrests. The city was reported quiet today. Bishop Guisar Valencia, in a long telegram to Gov. Tejeda today, protested against the killing of the two priests.

The bishop said, "I will gladly forfeit my life to you if the governor in exchange will leave the Catholic people to the exercise of their religion

Navy to Plumb Ocean Deep In Hunt for Quakes' Cause

(Associated Press.)

The Navy plans to plumb the Great Bartlett Deep in the Caribbean Sea between the Bay of Honduras and Guantanamo, Cuba, in search of important data bearing on Central American earthquakes.

This huge trough in the bottom of the sea, 1,000 miles long, 50 to 60 miles across and of uncertain depth, is known to be an earthquake center, but adequate soundings have never been made.

The Bartlett Deep stands as the missing link in the calculations of geologists seeking light on such earthquakes as the one which ruined the Nicaraguan capital, Managua, on March 31. This interest is all the keener because of the possible effect of earthquakes on Uncle Sam's proposed canal across Nicaragua.

Until the contour, scarps and faults of the land miles below the surface in the area between Cuba and Honduras have been accurately determined it is felt impossible to determine with precision whether the United States made a good investment in purchasing the canal site.

With complete data in hand, geologists may be enabled to verify or refute the theory that the large lakes which make up an important part of the suggested canal may be drained through subterranean channels by another earthquake.

Scattered soundings made previously in the Bartlett deep indicate a general depth of about 3½ miles, although in some cases a depth of almost 4 miles was recorded. The floor of this tremendous trench is

Economic Rebuilding Is Declared Problem

Buenos Aires, July 26 (U.P.).—The greatest problem facing the new regime in Chile is economic rehabilitation, Arturo Alessandri, former Chilean President and now an exile, said tonight in comment on the fall of the Ibanez government at Santiago.

"My happiness in today's events is complete," said Alessandri as he received the greetings and good wishes of scores of Chilean exiles and friends here. "My only regret was that deaths occurred in leading up to today's events, but that is the price of liberty and it will not be forgotten.

"Throughout my absence from Chile, almost four years, I have been certain that the spirit of liberty there could never be quenched. Now we have proof of that belief.

"I am awaiting word from Santiago before making plans to return there."

Alessandri praised the leadership of university students in the movement against Ibanez. Some Chilean exiles here were planning to charter a special train to return home in the next day or two.

Virginia Memorial May Be Postponed

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., July 26.—The building of Virginia's proposed war memorial ta a cost of $125,000 in the form of a carillion during the coming biennium is unlikely in the opinion of State Senator William A. Garrett, chairman of the Senate finance committee. He believes that the State will be able to weather a difficult economic period by prudent expenditures, reducing capital outlays to a minimum and holding to their present level the subsidies to State educational institutions.

The committee, he said, was confronted with the urgent need of additional facilities for the insane. All of the asylums visited are overcrowded, he said.

Road appropriations will not be affected by the general return from taxation, Senator Garrett said, since the gasoline tax and the income from the sale of license plates will provide for the carrying forward of the road program.

more than 2 miles below the surrounding ocean bottom.

As the earthquake season in the West Indies lasts from July through October, the task probably will not be undertaken until late fall or early winter.

Because of the magnitude of the job, the Hydrographic Office is seeking the use of a pair of destroyers. Thees are considerably faster than the Hydrographic Survey craft and can do the work in a fraction of the time. Equipped with devices for determining depth by means of an echo, they can register soundings while steaming along at 12 knots or more.

CHINESE MASSACRE OF 18,000 REPORTED

70,000 Are Made Homeless in Red Terror Reign in Interior.

Hongkong, July 26 (A.P.).—Reports of the massacre of 18,000 persons during a reign of terror carried on by Communists who seized the City of Tunglan, Kwangsi Province, were received here today in messages from the interior.

More than 70,000 persons were made homeless by pillaging and burning by the Reds, advices said, and damage estimated at $5,000,000 had been done.

The interior districts have been neglected by the military during the past several weeks during the struggle of the Canton insurgents to assert themselves against the rule of Chiang Kaishek and his Nanking regime. Appeals for aid were received from many parts of southern China.

From southern Kwangtung Province, where the Reds have defeated provincian troops and established a small Soviet in the Manning district, aid was asked. Airplanes were sent to Swatow, Kwangtung, to observe activities of Communists in that region in respnose to calls for help.

Merchants in southern Fukien Province, nominally under the control of Nanking, appealed to Canton for troops to suppress the Reds, who have captured the towns of Yungting and Shangchang.

Encouraged by the revolt in the north of Shi-Yu-Shan against Chiang Kai-Shek and the Nanking government, Canton insurgen tleaders were united today in actively preparing for conflict with the Nanking leaders.

Various factions of the southern insurgent movement have been united by the support of the northern war lord. Trench works damaged by floods to the extent of $2,000,000, are being rapidly repaired. The Canton-Suichow Railway also has been reopened since devastating floods of the past month have receded.

It was freely predicted that Chiang Kai-Shek would abandon his campaign against the Communists and embark openly on a war on Canton.

Preparations are proceeding for a thoroughly representative people's convention at Canton in October to devise another national constitution on democratic lines. Reports received here said Shanghai General Labor Unions with a membership of 1,000,000 were welcoming the Canton revolt.

Shanghai, China, Monday, July 27 (U.P.).—Floods which have damaged the National Capital, Nanking, and many other cities in the Yangtze valley were officially estimated today to have caused 500 deaths in the last few days.

About 4,000 houses were destroyed and more than 10,000 persons were homeless in the stricken area.

WOODCOCK PLANS BRADDOCK SKETCH

Dry Chief Evades Clamor of Job Seekers by Going to Camp.

Special to The Washington Post.

Camp Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 26.—Lieut. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition bureau chief, who is evading the "incessant clamor of job seekers" by reverting to his old Army life here with the Maryland National Guard, revealed today that he is utilizing his time between camp duties, to join the ranks of authors.

He is reading extensively in the comparative quiet of his tent in officers' row, laying the foundation for a sketch he intends to write of the life of Gen. Braddock.

The colonel was in a talktative mood following a review of the regiment, for which he is executive officer, by Maryland mayors.

Clamor of Job Seekers.

"It is a relief to get away from Washington for a while," he declared. "I find I can work better away from the mass of detail and the incessant clamor of job seekers. So much of my time is wasted in explaining to them that there are no vacancies in my department.

"I am sorry for them and try to be patient, but some times they are very ytrying."

On his small camp table there is a pile of heavy volumes.

"I am going to devote a bit of time to a little hobby of mine," the prohibition chief smiled. "On that table is a group of books dealing with Gen. Braddock, a little known man."

Little Known of Character.

"It is well know that he was defeated, but little is known of his character and ability, and Gen. Braddock as a man. I plan some day to writ a sketch of his life."

Col. Woodcock reiterated his prohibition enforcement plan of going after the big violators and leaving the private citizen to "his own conscience and education."

The enforcement ohief said he believed cutting down the supply would make education easier. He said agents had been given orders that there would be no gun play except in case of self defense. He said his men were better trained than heretofore, and have a new esprit de corps.

Col. Woodcock said he had been suffering from an attack of nervous indigestion, and said he hoped two weeks of army camp life would have a beneficial effect.

Shaw, 75, Takes Nap At Races on Birthday

Moscow, July 26 (A.P.).—George Bernard Shaw celebrated his seventy-fifth anniversary today by going to the horse races—the first he ever saw in his life—and falling asleep.

He nodded once or twice in the box he occupied with his party and finally took a good nap, with his chin on his chest, while Lady Astor fanned him.

Weariness, rather than boredom, forced the Irish sage to doze. He had been on the move steadily all day after an overnight train ride from Leningrad. He refused to say much about the races, but seemed to enjoy those he actually saw. Before them he observed to one of his Russian hosts:

"I suppose there will be only one horse in the races, since there is no competition in a socialist state."

LEA TO FACE JURY IN CAROLINA TODAY

Publisher, Son and Two Others Charged in Conspiracy in Bank Crash.

Ashville, N. C., July 26 (A.P.).—A special term of Buncombe County Superior Court will convene here tomorrow to try Col. Luke Lea, Tennessee publisher, and three others charged with conspiracy to defraud the now defunct Central Bank & Trust Co., of Ashville, of $1,300,000.

Besides Col. Lea, the defendants in the case set for trial are Luke Lea, jr., and E. P. Charlet, both of Nashville, and Wallace B. Davis, president of the bank when it closed last November.

J. Charles Bradford, cashier, was also indicted along with the other four, but Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles announced he would not be brought to trial at this time on account of his physical condition.

Attorneys for Col. Lea, Lea, jr., and Charlet have filed notice of a plea in abatement, in which the conention is made that the indictment in the case is defective. It is set forth that the grand jury was illegally constituted, and that therew rere various irregularities in the body's investigation of the bnak failure, which led to the indictment of 27 men.

4 KILLED AS TAXICAB PLUNGES INTO RIVER

New York Probe Is Ordered After Survivors Give Wrong Addresses.

New York July 26 (A.P.).—Two girls and two young men were killed early today when a taxicab in which they were riding with four other persons careened past a warning light and plunged into the East River.

The dead were identified as: Helen Bext, 16; Mary Snihur, 19; Thomas Gormely, 19 and Lewis Gurias, 20. From the position of their bodies when the car was finally hoisted out of the water five hours after the accident, it appeared that they had waged a terrific struggle to escape from the machine.

Driver Ordered Arrested.

Michael Favalora, 26, driver of the taxicab, was ordered arrested on a charge of homicide by an assistant district attorney, who questioned him at Bellevue Hospital, where he was treated for minor bruises.

When it was found that none of the names given by the three other survivors of the accident were known at the addresses they gave to the police, the prosecutor ordered an immediate investigation.

One Name Fictitious.

The names given were: Helen Smith, 19; John Martin, 22, and Martin Smith, 22. Police later found "Martin Smith" to be Andrew Graham.

All of the occupants of the taxicab, including the driver, were said by the police to have attended a party in a dance hall prior to the accident.

Witnesses told police the machine was traveling at a high rate of speed when it plunged. In his statement at the hospital, the driver said something had gone wrong with his steering apparatus.

When the four survivors of the tragedy came to the surface of the water, bystanders who had witnessed the plunge threw ropes to them and pulled them safely to shore.

Hagerstown Acts To Check Typhoid

Health Board Orders All Milk Entering City to eB Pasteurized.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 26.—Drastic measures were taken today at a special meeting of the city board of health to prevent the spread of typhoid from Maugansville, dairy center a few miles north of here, to this city.

A special order, making it necessary to pasteurize all milk entering the city for sale, was passed at a special meeting. Eleven cases of typhoid were reported today at Maugansville, from which section a large amount of Hagerstown milk comes. Nine cases have been previously reported here.

The source of the contagion was definitely determined today, said Dr. W Ross Cameron, health officer. He said a polluted well was responsible, all of the victims having had drinks from it.

NEW PRISON RIOTING IS FEARED AT JOLIET

Officials and Malcontents in Battle of Wits While Unrest Smolders.

Joliet, Ill., July 26 (A.P.).—A desperate game of wits with leaders of malcontents among the convicts pitted against prison officials, was the situation at the Illinois State Penitentiary, as pitctured todsy by Warden Henry C. Hill.

"Convicts intent on inciting another riot, spread word about that an uprising would be staged at a specified time," the warden said. "They know this information will reach officials through informers and that we will prepare for such a contingency, as we did twice last week.

"The leaders then call off the demonstration. By repeatedly causing these false alarms they think we will ultimately relax our vigilance, and when that time comes they intend to strike."

Warden Hill, however, convinced that the prisoners are but marking time, has taken every precaution. Special squads of highway police have been detailed to places near the penitentiary to remain oh call, and additional guards are being brought into service to supplement the regular force.

A series of riots occurred at the institution last spring and resulted in the deaths of several convicts as well as $500,000 damage to the new penitentiary by fire. Last week word reached officials that plans were under way for similar outbreaks.

The 2,600 convicts, including some of the most desperate characters in the country, were locked in cells and a thorough search of the institution for arms and combustibles was started.

Thus far eight flame bombs and numerous improvised weapons have been discovered in cell caches. The search will probably last ten days.

Warden Hill believes the unrest is caused by a comparatively few mutinous prisoners. A majority of the men, he said, are out of sympathy with the malcontents, but are forced by fear of reprisals to obey orders of the desperadoes.

Divoce Rate Gains On Marriage Knots

Virginia Statistics Show Comparison With Those of Previous Year.

Richmond, Va., July 26 (A.P.).—Divorces increased at a greater rate than marriages in Virginia in 1930, as compared with the previous year, it is shown in figures just released by the Bureau of the Census, Washington.

The per cent of increase for divorces was 6.8, as compared with 1.3 for marriages. Last year there were 3,261 divorces and the year before, 3,054. Marriages increased from 23,570 in 1929 to 23,871 in 1930.

Annulments showed a decrease, however, the number reported for last year being 19, as compared with 21 in 1929.

There were 1.34 divorces to every 1,000 of population last year and 1.27 per 1,000 of population during the previous year. The corresponding figures for marriages were 9.884 and 9.77.

For every couple obtaining a divorce last year there were 7.3 couples being married.

Postwar Era Continuance Of Fight, Avers Churchill

Declares Germany and France Are the Antagonists and Great Britain and U. S. Unwitting Financiers, With No Chance to Win.

Berlin, July 26 (A.P.).—The Boersen Courier today had an article by Winston Churchill, former British Chancellor of the Exchequer, in which he pictures the postwar years up to today as "merely a continuation of the World War, with Germany and France the antagonists and Great Britain and the United States the unwitting financiers of a struggle in which they have no chance to win anything."

The Anglo-Saxon nations, however, still may "escape with their skins," the article says, "by standing together and letting Europe's antagonists topple into the abyss clutching each other's throats.

"The old system of exploiting the defeated enemy," it continues, "was to carry away all the gold and beautiful women and other booty that could be carted away and then to let the ravished land get back to its feet as best it could, which might be in a comparatively few years.

"The new plan, however, tried after the World War, was to make a perpetual and highly organized cow out of the defeated nation—something that could be milked ad infinitum.

"Great Britain and the United States foolishly financed this attempt, but France, with a keen sense of realities, protected herself against its inevitable collapse."

Germany, Mr. Churchill said, "whose logical defensive strategy was to wreck the whole system of war debts and reparations," adopted the plan of borrowing money as fast as Great Britain and the United States would lend it, "which, regarded purely as war strategy, was a brilliant counterstroke against the Versailles treaty."

Meanwhile, he said, while reparations gold borrowed from America and England "was flowing securely into France's bullion vaults, Great Britain and the United States were becoming more and more deeply involved with Germany. Finally, after the Wall street crash, it began to dawn on various Anglo-Saxon bankers and there began a quiet, but later vigorous, demand for withdrawal of money from Germany.

"The result was a crisis that set the whole German structure trembling and the whole world worrying, with the exception of France, the only country which anchored itself in realities."

"France," he said, "is not worrying about Germany going Bolshevik. If Germany can not pay the French will take and hold by force everything they can lay hands on. Cities, mines and provinces are good security, regardless of turmoil in international finance."

"What is there to do?" Mr. Churchill asks, and concludes with the answer:

"We'll do everything we can for the others, if they are reasonable; but if they are not, then Great Britain and the United States, with mutual loyalty, and dealing justly and mildly with the others, will be strong enough to go their way alone."

IBANEZ JOINS THREE VICTIMS OF SLUMP

Political Mortality in South America Recently Has Been Extensive.

(United Press.)

Gen. Carlos Ibanez, forced out of the presidency of Chile, is the fourth in a group of famous South American chief executives to be caught in the swirling ebb tide of economic depression.

A scant two years ago this group had great prestige at home and abroad, based upon supposed political sagacity and a willingness to grapple with national problems in a constructive way.

Augusto B. Leguia, of Peru, the "Theodore Roosevelt of South America" was first to be caught in an undertow of political unrest that followed the collapse in commodity values after eleven years of virtually supreme power. He was overthrown August 25, 1930.

Hipolito Irigoyen, Argentina's political "man of mystery," was then upset by a military revolt which had wide popular support. He was driven out on September 6, 1930.

Next, in October, 1930, President Washington Luis of Brazi saw himself ousted by a military revolution almost at the hour when he was lauded by his ambassador here as a new "Abraham Lincoln," destined to weld the unity of the Brazilian states.

Depression Basic Cause.

In each case, the immediate causes of these reversals in presidential fortunes were political, but always there was a background of economic difficulties which came in the wake of the great crash of stock market and commodities' prices in the latter part of 1929.

Gen. Ibanez retained his good fortune longer than the others, but this year the troubles of the American cotton farmers and the failure of an attempt to stabilize copper prices hastened his downfall.

Ibanez's government organized a nitrate combine in which the government participated as a stockholder, the expectation being that dividends would afford a source of national reveaue in place of the long-established export tax of nitrates which had been much criticized abroad.

Consumption of nitrates slumped badly this year, particularly in the Southern cotton areas of the United States, where fertilizer purchases recently were reported 30 per cent below normal. This reacted adversely on the Chilean economic situation.

But an even greater problem was caused by the fact that copper during the last year has declined from a former stabilized price of 18 cents a pound to about 8 cents. Chilean copper exports this year are less than half the value in the same part of last year.

The depression in these two major Chilean commodities drastically reduced the normally large Chilean balance of trade, and created a difficult problem of foreign exchange. This, in turn, necessitated extraordinary financial measures in Chile.

While prosperity reigned, Ibanez was lauded at home and abroad for his ambitious program of education, social welfare and public improvements, but his enemies long claimed that these achievements were accompanied by an extensive curtailment of individual liberty.

When PPresident-elect Hoover visited Chile in 1928, his relations with President Ibanez apparently were exceptionally cordial. On that occasion the Chilean president attended a diplomatic reception at the American Embassy, which observers said was the first occasion on which he appeared publicly in company with his political enemies.

CURTIUS PLAYS HOST TO U. S. OFFICIALS

visit was of an entirely informal kind, and nothing that he or his German hosts have said publicly since his arrival justified the assumption that any concrete result might be forthcoming from his Berlin week-end.

However, the people as a whole seemed more optimistic and the hope that the fog of fear and international mistrust may be dispelled seemed to have grown.

The Secretary's informal Sunday with the German ministers began at 11 a. m., when they motored to the Berlin museum and saw the famous Temple of Pergamon which was brought here and restored by German archeologists.

They then drove to Potsdam, where they visited Sans Souci, the summer palace of Frederick the Great, and the "Neues Palais," where Wilhelm II maintained his summer residence until he fled to Holland.

From there they went to Wannsee and, after luncheon at the picturesque "Haus Am See," they returned to Berlin for tea at the American Embassy.

Tonight Chancellor Bruening entertained at dinner. At the affair the circle of guests was widened to include a number of cabinet ministers and several leading industrialists and bankers.

the government buildings. There they set up a shout for Ibanez.

American Ambassador William S. Culbertson went out and assured the crowd on his word of honor that Ibanez was not there and if he came he would be refused asylum. Police were called to protect the embassy and the crowd dwindled.

Then word flashed around that Ibanez was in La Moneda Palace. Hundreds of persons went there, to find troops on guard.

Crowds filled downtown streets shouting "Kill Ibanez."

Santiago, Chile, July 26 (U.P.).—Gen. Carlos Ibanez Del Campo, whose four-year dictatorship appeared invulnerable while other Latin American regimes were crumbling, resigned the Presidency of Chile today after two weeks of critical political maneuvers, outbursts of rioting and strikes. His downfall was due to serious national economic conditions and disorders led by students.

Negotiations leading up to the resignation of Gen. Ibanez were dramatic hours in the history of Chile, particularly in view of the necessity for establishment of a strong "junta," or ruling committee, to prevent bloodshed.

The determined, gray-haired president had persistently refused to yield to political demands that he step out to avoid fighting such as accompanied the revolutions in Bolivia, the Argentine, Peru, Brazil and Panama in the last year. The conferences at Moneda Palace lasted for many hours, in which the critical financial situation and the disorders instigated by the students were discussed.

Shortly after midnight the president abandoned his stand and agreed to step out, leaving but one of the "strong men" who ruled Latin America a year ago in power. That one is Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, who recently returned to the Presidency of Venezuela.

The commander in chief of the Chilean army, Minister of War Gen. Blanche, issued a manifesto at 2 p. m., directing the army to maintain "absolute adhesion to the new government." The army and navy, as well as the carabineers (state police) have been loyal to the Ibanez regime. It was their support that had made his government appear firm in the face of various popular manifestations.

Gen. Blanche said:

"The president of the republic, in a gesture of love of Chile and desirous of peace and concord, has decided to retire from his executive position."

He asked for the loyalty of the army and said that "Our fellow citizens thereby will be able to appreciate that the army is not the organ of persons nor parties, but is exclusively devoted to the constitution."

First Official Word.

The manifesto to the army was the first official word of the outcome of the conference, in which commercial and political leaders, called together by the President, had urged Ibanez to resign.

The news threw the capital into a outburst of jubilation. Men, and children ran through the streets shouting their approval of the army, but expressing hostility toward the carabineers, who were the most loyal of the deposed president's forces.

The troops because they put the constitution above loyalty to a political personage, were hailed as heroes and the appearance of a soldier was a signal for a fresh outburst of cheering. Girls impulsively broke into the ranks and kissed them, and the national anthem was sung again and again in celebration of what was termed a popular victory over the Ibanez regime.

The machine guns, which had been mounted at strategic positions throughout the capital to prevent rioting, were hauled down and flags were pushed out of windows in every street. The civilians and soldiers fraternized and sang the national hymn.

Economic Situation Blamed.

The Chilean crisis, which was the first dangerous situation arising since Gen. Ibanez assumed office in July, 1927, for a six-year term, grew out of the declining price of nitrates and copper—the two great exports of the nation. Drastic administration reforms were started a year ago in an effort to avoid an economic crisis, but the government could not prevent suspension of payments on interest and amortization of foreign obligations last week.

Premier Rodolfo Haramillo and his cabinet resigned July 9 and Francisco Garges y Gana was unable to carry out a commission to frm a new government. Pedro Blanquier was more successful, but his cabinet, which included several oppositionist leaders, lasted only four days. Garces y Gana tried again, and his cabinet was sworn in July 22, while hostille demonstrations occurred in the tsreets. The cabinet quickly fell, and Premier Carlos Frodden came into office in a last desperate attempt to stave off an uprising.

U. S. Envoy Starts Home.

The seriousness of the situation prompted Carlos Davila, Ambassador to the United States and one of the most powerful political figures in Chile, to sail for home. He left Panama Thursday for Valparaiso, apparently to aid in solving the present crisis. The heavy withdrawal of funds from the State Savings Bank on Friday and Saturday caused the president to confer with leading industrialists, but they were unable to agree on a method of halting the withdrawals. It was said that they totaled more than 20,000,000 Chilean pesos in two days.

The opposition leaders in the Chamber of Deputies renewed their demands for the resignation of Gen. Ibanez on Saturday night and several deputies who had led the movement tsayed all night in the chamber because they feared arrest if they ventured into the street.

Th censorship on newspapers and outgoing press messages was intensified. The important morning newspaper El Mercurio refused to publish yesterday, sending its staff home because of censorship. Diario Illustrado, ignoring the censorship, appeared this morning with various details of the rioting in Santiago, Valparaiso and other cities.

WICKERSHAM CRIME BODY HITS PENAL SYSTEM AS FLAT FAILURE denunciation of present prison conditions.

Institutions Overcrowded.

It revealed Federal prisons during 1930 were overcrowded 65.9 per cent more than capacity. It asserted that well over one-third of all the prisons in the country were between 70 and 100 years old and that 21 per cent of all men's prisons were without plumbing.

The State prisons in Oregon, the Charlestown prison in Massachusetts, the Auburn and Clinton prisons in New York, the Folsom prison in California and the old prison at Joliet, Ill., were given as examples of such institutions.

The commission criticized the size of the cells, small for one man but housing two which it found in many of the older prisons. In these restricted quarters, it said, the air would have to be changed completely in each cell every few minutes to prevent objectionable odors.

Idleness Blamed in Riots.

"In view of the small cells, the poor ventilation, the insufficient light, the crowded conditions," and the absence of plumbing in many prisons, the commission said, "unemployment adds a burden and strain upon both the prison administration and the inmates which becomes almost intolerable."

"In some measure the recent riots are attributable to the idleness in the prisons" the report continued.

"In some of the prisons men are kept in their little cells for the greater part o fthe 24 hours, being taken out for a bit of exercise during the day and returned to their cells again. In some the men are taken to an empty loft during the day and made to sit on benches with nothing to do from breakfast till noon and then from noon to supper."

Condemning the use of harsh discipline, the commission reported that in the months that followed the institution of "strict disciplinary methods" at the Jefferson City (Mo.) Prison, five men committed suicide, four were killed by other prisoners and 78 escaped.

Traces Vivious Circle.

"It is clear at present," the commission said, "that the more punishment in prison the more discontent, the more discontent, the more irritation, the more irritation, the more plotting, the more plotting, the more violations of the rules and the greater the need for more severe punishment.

"The whole procedure is in the nature of a vicious circle for which there seems to be no remedy."

The advisory committee of 24 experts, among them Sanford Bates, director of Federal prisons, agreed with the committee that the present prison system "does not reform the criminal" and "fails to protect society."

One of its recommendations was for the expansion of prison industry. It asserted there was a popular fallacy that convicts could be kept busy without competing with free labor.

To the committee's report was appended a study of police jails and village lockups, prepared by Hastings H. Hart, chairman of the committee. Mr. Hart condemned the majority of these prisons as reeking with filth and vermin. While thousands are fire traps and not infrequently prisoners have been cremated in them."

Denounces Third Degree.

He also denounced the use in them of "third degree" methods, accompanied by "cruel and illegal treatment and sometimes torture of persons accused of crime, whether innocent or guilty."

The report of the commission itself dealt with many local problems and situations.

It asserted the overcrowding in prisons was "probably worse than it has ever been." Of the Clinton and Auburn prisons in New York, it said the situation was "intolerable" and that men were sleeping in double deck cots in some of the corridors.

The Wisconsin prison was reported to have 188 men sleeping in hallways while the Kentucky State yReformatory had two men in cells not big enough for one, and the same State's prison at Eddyville also had an overflow.

The New Mexico State prison was reported as housing two men in a cell seven by eight feet, while the Minnesota State Prison at Stillwater had men in the corridors and the Washington Prison at Walla Walla had men sleeping in tents.

Barbarous Methods Hit.

The report said recent prison riots had brought to light "the existence of barbarous methods of discipline" that previously were unknown. As examples of disciplinary action it noted that at the Washington State Reformatory a group of men spent the working hours in "walking single file in a beaten path about a small yard."

In the Wyoming State Penitentiary at Rawlins, it said, the system of "shackling a man to a post and turning a stream of cold water on him" is still in use. In the old prison at Joliet, the commission continued, "two men, and sometimes three or four, are shackled to the door of one cell." At Marquette, Mich., men being punished were said to stand cuffed to a door during working hours, while at Stillwater, Minn., the same practice was followed with the handcuffs placed waist high.

After mentioning the riots in Folsom, Calif.; the Colorado State Prison, Jefferson City, Mo.; Columbus, Ohio; Leavenworth, and Auburn and Clinton, N. Y., the commission said: "If there is a great deal of unnecessary irritation, if the environment is irritating, then no amount of discipline or cruelty will save the institution from internal violence, riot, fire and murder.

"The pressure becomes so great the prisoners break out in unexpected fury not because they plan to but because some incident opens the valve, so to speak, of hitherto suppressed feelings and the prison is in a state of fury and hysteria before any one knows exactly just what has happened."

UNION OFFICER SLAIN BY CHICAGO GUNMEN

Newspaper Handlers' Chief Is Shot to Death in Car; 2 Arrests Ordered.

Chicago, July 26 (A.P.).—Ely H. Orr, secretary-treasurer of the Newspaper Delivery Drivers, Chauffeurs and Handlers Union, was assassinated shortly after he left the plant of the Herald and Examiner early today.

Two men in a speeding automobile poured a fusillade of shotgun slugs into Orr as he sat in his machine at a street intersection awaiting the go signal from a stop light.

A newsboy, Emil Wosnicki, only witness to the shooting, said the slayers laughed as they drove away.

Orr recently supplanted "West-Side" Jack Barry as secretary of the union and attaches of the State's attorney's office immediately ordered a search for the former convict. An arrest order also was issued for Anthony (Red) Kissane, gunman.

Former Newspaper Employe.

The victim, for 27 years an employe of the Herald-Examiner prior to his election to the union office last December 12, visited the newspaper offices at 5 a. m. in company with two business agents, Dan Fiore and Herbert Phelps. The business agents said they parted from Orr and went into the restaurant for breakfast while the victim drove away toward his home. Their story was corroborated by Fiore's son, an employe of the Herald-Examiner, and Policeman Anthony Halvorsen, who engaged the three in conversation.

It was a few blocks away from the newspaper plant at the intersection of Milwaukee and Fullerton avenues, that the assassins caught up with the Orr machine.

Young Wosnicki was taken to the Detective Bureau where he was shown rogue's gallery photographs of suspects. It was not announced if any identification was made, but squads were detailed to bring in Barry and Kissane.

Threatened, by Barry, Claim.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles E. Lounsbury said he had information Barry had several times threatened Orr's life. The latter was elected to the office at a meeting held under supervision of the Racket Bureau of the State's attorney's office, following a plea from President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, to all union locals to oust known racketeers. Barry, Mr. Lounsbury said, was a pal of James (Fur) Sammons, notorious O'Donnell gangster.

He was once charged with complicity in a $500,000 liquor warehouse robbery. He also served a term in Leavenworth Penitentiary for complicity with "Big Tim" Murphy in the $348,000 Dearborn street mail robbery.

Nicholas, Brother of Carol, And Kyra May Be Wed

The betrothal of Prince Nicholas, manian royal house, to the Grand 27-year-old bachelor of the Rou- Duchess Kyra is rumored in Budapest. She was a visitor in Washington last year.

Bride, Chosen by Popular Fancy, Is Niece of Queen Marie.

Bucharest, July 26 (A.P.).—Prince Nicholas, 27-year-old brother of King Carol, may be the next royalty to marry.

Succession to the Roumanian throne depends upon 9-year-old Prince Michael, who reigned as king when his father returned from exile.

Michael is a strong youngster, and has easily overcome slight illnesses. But an attack of influenza during the Christmas holidays occasioned comment among the people over whom he recently ruled.

This feeling that the succession depends upon a single thread has given rise to rumors of a forthcoming betrothal of Nicholas.

The bride who has been chosen by popular fancy for Prince Nicholas is his first cousin, the Grand Duchess Kyra, daughter of the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia. Her mother is a sister of Queen Marie of Roumania.

Color was lent to the rumored betrothal when Queen Marie and Princess Ileana visited for a week at the grand duke's villa near St. Briac, Brittany.

Yet those in immediate attendance on the dowager queen denied that she had gone there to discuss a marriage between her son and niece. They explained that she was only paying her annual visit to her sister.

Next came word that Nicholas himself was going to France and this revived the talk, but King Carol said he was sending his brother to that country on a special mission, charging him to make a close study of munitions manufacture, especially of planes and artillery.

Yet the talk will not down. It is pointed out that the brothers are devoted to each other, that Nicholas gladly gave up his place on the regency when Carol returned to take the throne from young Michael, and that Nicholas has been in noticeably better spirits since this change was made.

It is also said that he would readily accede to any plan that would strengthen the throne by making succession certain. His marriage would be the more desirable now that there is virtually no prospect for annulment of the divorce which Princess Helen, Michael's mother, obtained from Carol when the latter was in France.

ILEANA IS MARRIED TO ARCHDUKE ANTON

Bridal of Roumanian Princess to Hapsburg Solemnized in Palace.

Sinaia, Roumania, July 26 (A.P.). In the picturesque Palace of Pelesh, perched like a fairy castle on the crest of lofty, pine-covered hills, Princess Ileana, pretty 21-year-old daughter of the late King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Roumania, was married today to Archduke Anton, seventh son of Archduke Leopold Salvator of Hapsburg.

This was the merriest day the population of the staid summer resort of Sinaia ever experienced.

The villagers were up at dawn and delegates from Princess Ileana's own corps of Girl Scouts strewed all the streets approaching the castle with flowers. The entire population lined the roadway to see the guests, officials, ministers and prelates arrive at the palace.

Many of the peasants rode into town bareback on rough country horses; others drove in Old World ox-carts, while shepherd flute players, gypsies and musicians assembled in the palace grounds and played joyous airs for the rustic dancers, adding to the merriment.

Press Given Audience.

Just before the big event of the day, Princess Ileana and Archduke Anton presented themselves to the press and submitted to the process of being photographed and giving newspapermen the opportunity to ask questions, which were answered frankly. The photographing over, the courage of the princess failed her when she was requested to speak into the microphone. She said she had prepared no speech and was so overcome by her emotions she could not extemporize a greeting to the world.

As the hour for the religious ceremony approached, about 300 guests had assembled in or about the large hall of the palace, where an altar was set up. After a short period of waiting, during which the civil ceremony was taking place, the smiling princess entered the hall at the same time as the bridegroom, who looked serious and preoccupied.

Immediately after the civil ceremony, through which Princess Ileana remains a Roumanian citizen, civil protocols had been signed and witnessed and the young couple had been presented to the ministers of state.

Catholic Church Ceremony.

This done, the procession proceeded to the chapel in the castle, in the vestibule of which hung many images of saints, many flags and many tokens of royalty. Three hundred nobles, diplomats and ministers there witnessed the impressive wedding ceremony according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

It was punctually at 11 a. m. when the princess, smiling happily and leaning on the arm of King Carol, who held the scepter of state in his left hand, advanced up the aisle and took her place before the altar.

Prince Friedrich Wilhelm Hohenzollern, in a Prussian general's uniform of the prewar days, stood at the princess' left. Prince Friedrich's tunic, like that of King Carol, displayed a long row of insignia of various orders.

On the altar, around which stood ten large lighted candles, were three upholstered golden chairs, upon which sat the three prelates, Prince Wladimir Chika, Bishop Cisar and Bishop Fiskner.

The ceremony opened with a solemn mass, accompanied by the grand organ of the palace, a choir of ten nuns from the convent of Sinaia and a trained boys' choir.

Pope's Blessing Given.

The principal witness, after King Carol was Dowager Queen Marie, Princess Ileana's mother, who was present with her other daughters, former Queen Elizabeth of Greece and Queen Marie of Jugoslavia. The young Crown Prince Michael was also at her side.

As the organ peals ended Bishop Cisar read in Latin the words of the Catholic marriage ceremony, handing, in due course the rings to the bridegroom, who placed one of them on the finger of the princess.

Archduke Anton's "yes" was in a voice scarcely audible, but Princess Ileana's was uttered in a loud, firm voice. In the course of the ceremony the papal envoy gave the couple the Pope's blessing and a gold cross containing a relic of St. Theresa.

The princess wore white satin interwoven with threads of gold. On her head was a gold diadem surmounted by a large diamond. Her train, which was unusually long, was carried by two Girl Scouts, 10 and 7 years old.

The bridegroom wore evening dress, with rather wide trousers, and on his breast was the Order of King Ferdinand.

Honor War Dead.

Three important personages were conspicuous in the crowd. These were the patriarch of the Orthodox Church, Miron Christea; former Regent Saraceanu, and former King George of Greece. Another prominent person was conspicuously absent. This was King Alexander of Jugoslavia, Princess Ileana's brother-in-law.

After the wedding the young couple drove through the town in a carriage drawn by four horses. They were followed in a second carriage by King Carol, Dowager Queen Marie and Crown Prince Michael. They then drove to the cemetery and decorated the graves of enemy and allied dead.

All the guests attended a gala luncheon at 1 p. m., after which the young couple left for Castle Bran in Transylvania. After several days at Bran they will proceed to London for a visit and, following this, they will fly to their castle at Freiburg, Germany.

A slight frown flitted over the brows of several persons when, in the midst of the ceremony, one large candle which graced the altar, fell.

It was denied today that the couple intends to visit Budapest and Vienna during their honeymoon.

It was reported tonight the couple would travel with an Austrian passport as Anton and Ileana von Hapsburg.

Ten Weather Stations Planned.

Boston, July 25 (U.P.).—Ten new meteorological observation stations are to be established in New England next month by the United States Weather Bureau, giving this section a total of sixteen. The principal purpose for this expansion is to provide aviators with more authentic information on flying conditions.

Maryland Mayors Review Regiment

Militia Presents Fine Appearance in First Camp Drill.

Special to The Washington Post.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 26.—A review by mayors of Maryland towns which sent companies to the encampment was the chief feature of an otherwise quiet Sunday for Maryland's Fighting First," which went into camp here yesterday for two weeks' training. Included in the regiment are companies from Silver Spring, Kensington, Laurel and Hyattsville.

Commanded by Col. D. John Markey, the regiment passed in review before the mayors, presenting an excellent military front, although this was the first review of the encampment.

The troops attended church this morning. Catholics attended mass at brigade headquarters, sung by the Rev. Philip J. Gergen, of Blue Ridge Summit. Protestants attended services at which Maj. F. C. Reynolds, regimental chaplain, officiated. The remainder of the day was passed in swimming, boating and other amusements and entertaining nearly 1,000 visitors from all over the State.

Sound movies were shown at night in the open. The mayor of one of Maryland's most important cities, Frederick, was not among the reviewing group of the review. He is Maj. E. F. Munishower, and he was too busy commanding the First Battalion in the parade. The regimental band from Frederick furnished music.

The regiment was addressed Saturday night by Gen. Milton Reckord. Intensive training will start tomorrow.

Tammany Sachem To Mark 102 Years

New York Election Board Head Will Broadcast on Birthday.

New York, July 26 (U.P.).—John R. Voorhis, president of the board of elections and sachem of Tammany Hall, will be 102 years old tomorrow, but he isn't interested in the event and doesn't think any one else is.

He is wrong, as he will find out tomorrow, when the customary queue of well-wishers assembles to congratulate him and, perhaps, "ask silly questions." Whether the line will form at his office as in the past or at the home, to which he has been confined recently on a diet of milk and eggs six times a day, depends on his physician. He also has agreed, health permitting, to broadcast at 2 p. m. on "New York 99 Years Ago, at Least."

One reason Voorhis is bored with birthdays is that he has spent three months, one week and four days of his life celebrating them.

Blind but Transcribes Books.

Portland, Oreg., July 25 (U.P.).—Four years ago Miss Helen R. Lewis, 60, and blind, started transcribing books into Braille for the benefit of other afflicted persons. She has completed 130 volumes, or a total of 15,000 pages of Braille print in that time.

NIGHT RIOTING FOLLOWS SHOT AIMED AT MEXICAN GOVERNOR and not spill any blood of my priests."

"As a consequence of the conduct of the state government of Vera Cruz," the bishop telegraphed President Ortiz Rubio, "in the presence of thousands of children, two of my priests were murdered within the Church of Ascuncion when complying with the sacred ministry of teaching the catechism to infants." He called on the president to "free my priests and the people of Vera Cruz from such savage outrages by adopting a radical remedy, which civilization demands."

Ecclesiastical authorities have regarded as unconstitutional the Vera Cruz state law which says that only thirteen priests, or one for every 100,000 inhabitants, may continue to officiate in the state, which now has some 2,000.

Reports today said that while Fathers Landa and Acosta were ministering to several hundred children, four men dressed in civilian clothes entered the church and took up positions near the priests. At a signal they fired simultaneously.

There was an exchange of shots between troops and a mob in the streets last night and today all public buildings and the churches were guarded by troops

Attempt to Assassinate Vicar General Detailed

Mexico City, July 26 (A.P.).—One priest is dead, one perhaps mortally wounded, a third less seriously hurt, and four churches were damaged by fire in the State of Vera Cruz, Bishop Guisar informed the press today.

Priests at Jalapa, the state capital, and in some other parts of Vera Cruz were in hiding, Bishop Guisar said.

Except for an attempted assassination of the vicar general of Jalapa, Pedro Castillo y Landa, the bishop said, he had been informed of no new disturbances today. Bishop Guisar said two men entered the house of the vicar general and tried to kill him, but Mgr. Landa escaped over a back fence and he, together with the remainder of the priests, was in hiding.

Papal Nuncio Nuiz y Flores today ordered Bishop Guisar to transmit orders to all priests in Vera Cruz that in view of the circumstances they were free to decide a future course, whether they will stay in the state or flee to safety.

"We do not want to take responsibility and order the priests to stay when lives are endangered," the papal nuncio said. "We therefore are leaving it for each individual priest involved to decide. Probably many of them, unwilling to leave their people, will go into hiding and attempt to minister to the people in secret.

"The church gravely laments yesterday's occurrences in Vera Cruz and Jalapa. We are doing all we can to keep the people quiet and have repeatedly cautioned and ordered our people to refrain from rising up in arms.

"Armed resistance is against the spirit of Christianity and the church. It is against Christian doctrine."

Bishop Guisar charged that Gov. Tejeda is chief of the Communist party in Mexico and is trying to force Communism on the State of Vera Cruz.

ARREST OF MURRAY LOOMS IN SPAN ROW

a guard would be maintained at the approach until the controversy is ended.

Gov. Murray previously ordered martial law in a narrow strip of land at the Oklahoma approach to the interstate bridge. He said he so acted to nullify the kind of injunction obtained yesterday by the toll bridge owners.

Garbed in a cotton suit, the mustached commander in chief of the Oklahoma troops paraded today at the head of his army of 30 guardsmen. The parade was witnessed by visitors at the Red River "front" and recorded by a movie photographer.

A free bridge paralleling the toll structure was opened yesterday after a Federal court injunction was dismissed in Texas. This was the main objective of the Oklahoma governor's bridge war. He originally ordered the opening of the free bridge, despite the Texas injunction. The barricading of the toll bridge was inaugurated simultaneously with the opening of the free structure.

After his conferences today Gov. Murray explained:

"The free bridge is open now. If folks are fool enough to want to pay 75 cents to cross here, let 'em do it."

After his arrival at the bridge the governor declared Judge Neblett could not cite him for contempt for failure to allow the opening of the toll bridge. The judge declared he would so act if Murray refused to obey the court order.

"How can they cite me for violating an injunction they did not serve on me?" Murray asked. He added that all provisions of the restraining order had been complied with and that Adjt. Gen. Charles F. Barrett had been relieved as active head of the guard because he was named in the order.

A holiday atmosphere pervaded the military zone today. Hundreds of persons from Texas and Oklahoma gathered at the scene of the picturesque Oklahoma governor's latest bid for fame. Laughter, wise cracks and cheers for the fiery executive were heard frequently.

WHEAT VIEW SCORES HOLDING OF SURPLUS

Steadily Increasing Supplies Also Blamed by Club for Situation.

Chicago, July 26 (A.P.).—The Grain Market Analyist Club, composed of leading grain statisticians and crop experts of the country, in a report tonight of its study of the world wheat situation, blamed steadily increasing supplies for five years and efforts to withhold the surplus from the market for the present low prices. The report says:

"Unlike most natural products, the use of wheat for human food is practically uniform in quantity, whether the original prices be high or low. The capacity of the stomach for white bread is neither materially increased nor markedly decreased by the cost of the wheat that enters into the making of the bread. A surplus of production and a decline in price does not automatically increase the use of wheat by stimulating the human appetite. If the price is low enough, it brings a substitution demand for use as animal feed, but for practical purposes this character of demand is of small value as a price stimulant because it represents a high cost human food in competition with low cost animal feeds.

Forces Price Concessions.

"There is no purpose in yearly wheat production except for human food, and a surplus beyond human consumptive capacity means accumulative unwanted surplus that forces price concessions. Efforts to attribute responsibility for present low wheat prices to market manipulation, short selling or Russian lumping, break down entirely in the face of a tremendous and growing world surplus of wheat in comparison with world requirements.

"This surplus represents the patriotic effort to stimulate wheat production in North America, Argentina and Australia during the World War, to fill the void left by the withdrawal of Russia from the field of world supply. The acreage added in these countries for that purpose has been retained even after Russia returned to the position of the greatest wheat producer in the world, and it is this excessive acreage coupled with above-normal acre yields in the last few years that has produced the world surplus of wheat.

Increasing Rapidly.

"In the past five years, world yearly wheat supplies have been increasing more rapidly than could be absorbed at prevailing prices. In the first five years of the decade (1920-25) world available supplies averaged 3,525,000,000 bushels yearly, and consumption 3,220,000,000 bushels. In the second half of the decade (1925-30) supplies averaged nearly 4,000,000,000 bushels yearly and consumption 3,550,000,000 bushels yearly. Last year, available supplies were 4,365,000,000 bushels and consumption about 3,765,000,000 bushels. In other words, surpluses were steadily increasing.

"Efforts, either by individual cooperation like the Canadian pools, or governmental operations like the Federal Farm Board, or State efforts in Australia to hold temporarily the surplus off the market, only make the situation worse in the end, through holding out the hope of securing profitable prices and thus encouraging a continued excess of acreage and excessive production. The prestige of government, backed by hundreds of millions of dollars, cannot overturn the immutable law of supply and demand, and such efforts continued only serve to waste the taxpayers' money and to make the situation worse by encouraging creation of a further surplus when it is the existence of that surplus which is the fundamental cause of the trouble."

HOOVER'S SECRETARY'S SON IS SONG LEADER

Louis Johrden, Post Staff Photographer.

In the cool hours of the evening before retiring at Camp Letts John Marshall Newton, 11-year-old son of Walter Newton, secretary to President Hoover, breaks out his ukelele and knocks out some real good music while the other boys sing. He is very popular at camp, and despite his handicap of having only one leg is a good swimmer.

SON OF HOOVER AID ENJOYS CAMP LETTS

John Marshall Newton, 11, Expert in Water Despite Loss of Leg.

Eleven-year-old John Marshall Newton, son of Walter Newton, secretary to President Hoover, seems to be having the time of his life at Camp Letts on the Chesapeake Bay despite the fact that he lost a leg in an accident about a year ago.

He is an excellent swimmer and is well-known for his ability to play the ukelele and sing. This is his first summer at the camp although he has been a member of the Y. M. C. A. for the last two years. He leads his classes in the summer school, which he is attending at the camp, but his main interest centers around swimming, boating, leathercraft and archery, all of which he does well despite his handicap.

Mrs. Newton drives down to visit him twice a week and his father usually goes down once a week.

The fact that young Newton is pictured fully clothed is rather misleading, as he spends most of his time in a bathing suit. Several times when his mother has visited him, she has asked him for his soiled clothing, but none was forthcoming. He just doesn't wear his clothes enough to warrant their being washed, he explained.

Fares With Gun Take Driver's Cab and Cash

Thomas J. Sullivan, 200 B street northwest, a taxicab driver, told police early yesterday that he was held up at the point of a gun by two colored men who hailed him at Union and N streets southwest, taking his cab and $15.

A lookout for the men was broadcast by police.

The GIRL About Town

FRED BRITTEN acted as reception committee at Montauk Point, for the society fliers last week. Some of my friends had flown to Montauk for the big sight of seeing society come right out of the skies and landing at the front door of the chairman of Naval Affairs. There was Fred, ready to greet them, the world's best dressed man, and Mrs. Fred, by his side, in immaculate sport dress. Mrs. Britten certainly knows how to dress, and I wish I had her wardrobe.

Some of the girls swimming with me last night at the Congressional Pool had been in Ventnor and raved about Ruth Wilson Hurley and how divine she looks in her sky blue bathing suit. Her children splashed about in suits which just matched "mother's." Ruth is a beauty, and better than that, she is sweet. She grew up in Washington, and, of course, is at home as a Cabinet hostess.

BY the way, I saw Daisy Calhoun—you know whom I mean—Margaret Rose Anthony Julia Josephine Catherine Cornelia Calhoun—dining at the Chevy Chase Club, on Saturday, with Capt. Calhoun. The club is only a short way from Rossdhu, their Scotch manor house in the depths of Braemar Forest. From snatches of conversation which floated our way I gathered that Daisy etc. is writing a new book. Her "Autobiography of a Chameleon" sold well and was written in a vivacious style, with a world of laughs and not a sting in it. Heard them say that the young Warings will be visiting them shortly; Margaret, Mrs. Calhoun's daughter having married Charles Waring, of Charleston, S. C., you know. In that city the Warings rank with Lowells and Cabots in Boston, and reserve most of their conversation for deities.

Cynthia and I had tea at the New Shoreham and guess what celebrity we saw there! Sinclair Lewis! Honest; fresh from Nobel prize honors and fisticuff exercises with Theodore Dreiser. Wonder if his new book is to deal with Washington? How jolly that would be! Dorothy Thompson, his wife, was with him. What a time we had talking over old times in Reno, where we first met! I was there with sister, helping her serve out her ninety days of marital servitude so that she could remarry her first husband and Sinclair was there trying to get reduced the alimony he paid to his first wife. Never shall forget how excited he was when he won a point in his attempt, and they came to our apartment to make whoopee in celebration of this victory.

RAPIDAN CAMP REST ENJOYED BY HOOVER

President Goes for Long Walk With Guests; Back in Capital Today.

Luray, Va., July 26 (A.P.).—The temporary holiday on work declared by President Hoover continued today at his Rapidan camp.

In contrast with other recent weekends when he kept constantly in touch with the German situation, he has enjoyed a complete rest on this trip to the mountains.

He went for a long walk with guests this morning, but on his return sat on the front porch at the lodge and relaxed.

The autumnlike weather continued and an open fire was again welcome in the cool night air. There was no change in his plan to return to Washington in time to be at his desk by 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. A mass of detail on the European negotiations is awaiting him.

Mrs. Hoover may return with him. She spent last week at the camp to escape the Capital heat.

The guests rode, walked and talked for diversion. Among them was Henry Robinson, Los Angeles financier, an old friend of the President.

Others were Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan; Mark Sullivan, Washington writer; Byron Price, chief of the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press, and Mrs. Price, and former Senator Baird, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Baird.

GRAF ZEPPELIN QUITS LENINGRAD FOR NORTH

the expedition, and Dr. Eckener, veteran commander of the Graf, the voyagers expect to cover approximately 7,000 miles on a cruise which is for the purpose of gathering meteorological and geographical data with a view to determining whether a regular dirigible route across the north pole is feasible.

No attempt will be made to cross the pole, however, the farthest north point on the journey being about 82 degrees latitude.

By working at night as well as by day in the perpetual northern daylight at this season of the year, the scientists hoped to crowd twelve ordinary days' work into six.

A new pontoon arrangement makes it possible for the dirigible to alight on water and several such descents to the ocean were contemplated, including one for the meeting with the Maligin, which is carrying scientists and tourists. Mail will be exchanged between the two vessels.

U. S. BUREAU CHIEFS SEEK WAYS TO SAVE

Must Give President Replies to Demand for Economy by August 17.

(Associated Press.)

Governmental bureau chiefs yesterday wrinkled their brows as they sought new answers to familiar questions on finance.

President Hoover has directed them to give detailed information as to how they expect to decrease expenses even more for the current fiscal year. They must have the data in the hands of the bureau of the budget by August 17.

Renewed insistence on further cuts came only a few weeks after a series of conferences between the Chief Executive and Cabinet officers at the camp on the Rapidan. The discussions were concerned almost entirely with ways to slash expenditures.

Wants $150,000,000 Saved.

Out of them came the statement that the President expected $150,000,000 would be saved during the current fiscal year.

The War and Agriculture departments advised the President they hoped to reduce expenditures by approximately $20,000,000 each; the Navy foresaw a $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 reduction; the Postoffice Department about $15,000,000 and the Interior Department $4,000,000.

The additional amounts needed to approximate the $150,000,000 were not made public. It was explained that the War Department would retain some of its funds by abandoning Army posts no longer needed for military purposes. The Navy was to abandon the Island of Guam, but the details involved in most of the program were not given.

Events Not Encouraging.

It was indicated, however, that it would come from attention to every item for which the departments spend money.

Developments since the Rapidan conferences have not been encouraging to those who handle the financial affairs of the Government. The fiscal year ended with a deficit of $903,000,000. Treasury officials see no prospect of any increase in taxes in the near future. In addition, the Treasury will not get the $180,000,000 in war debts due.

In a letter to all Government departments, the President described the situation as "serious" and demanded that all unnecessary activity be abandoned. The responses promised every effort at compliance.

Mother Seeks Richard Reaves.

Police were asked yesterday to locate Richard Reaves, 15, who has been missing from his home at 2628 Fourth street northeast, since Saturday. Mrs. Fannie Reaves, his mother, who made the request, said the boy was large for his age and wore blue denim overalls and was hatless and coatless when last seen.

CITY CARE BANISHED AT WOODLAND BEACH

Post's Summer Home Site on South River Is Refuge From Trouble.

When the ball team has lost a majority of its games for the week; when the books don't balance and when all sorts of things go wrong at home, then is the time to go out in the country, to relax and forget your troubles.

Where is the best place to do this? Washington residents have long sought a spot not too far away, where they might spend week-ends, or nights, in comfort and peace, and it has remained for The Washington Post to solve this problem for them.

Woodland Beach, on the South River in Maryland, is just the spot for which you have been looking. It is only 32 miles away and it has everything you can think of to make it a successful summer home colony.

It has appealed to hundreds already. Cottages are springing up all along its 4½ miles of waterfront and throughout its wooded areas. Daily there are scores of people in the cooling waters of the South River and its coves or drifting about on these waters fishing, or just loafing.

For the very reasonable price of $93 a lot, property is for sale at Woodland Beach. You do not even need $93 to become a property owner there. The simple payment of $9 in cash plus the cost of a subscription to The Washington Post will enable you to make a selection and the rest may be paid at the rate of $3.50 a month.

Call at The Washington Post office today. Let one of the Woodland Beach officials show you some of the fine locations still available and then buy. You will not regret it.

Two Men Are Arrested In $135 Disappearance

Two men were arrested yesterday by Fourth Precinct police in connection with the theft of $135 in currency from Frank A. Dennison, 916 D street southwest. Dennison said the money was secreted beneath a tablecloth in his room at the D street address and was missing yesterday morning when he looked for it.

The men arrested are Michael Collins and Patrick Martin, who Dennison believes may have been instrumental in the theft. They are both roomers at the D street residence.

Bulgarian Authorities Will Study Wreck of Plane From Istanbul.

Sofia, Bulgaria, July 26 (A.P.).—The deaths of two Americans, Rutgers Barclay, 20, of New York, and Pauline Kast, 30, of Washington, D. C., were officially reported today by the Sofia Agency of the French Air Transport Co. "Cidna," whose airplane crashed into the forests near Kurudjevo Friday.

The official announcement was made on the basis of a communication from company's agent at Istanbul. The report said Barclay was born in New York in 1911 and Miss Kast in Washington in 1901.

Washington dispatches said Miss Kast gave her address as Cleveland in applying for a passport and said that her father was W. G. Kast, of Harrisburg, Pa.

Bodies to Lie in State.

The Istanbul agent was unable to supply other particulars as all documents were reduced to ashes in the fire that consumed the plane.

The American consul at Sofia was arranging today for the bodies of the two American victims to lie in state at Burgas, where they were to be transported to await instructions from relatives as soon as the latters' addresses were forthcoming.

It appears that the plane, which left Istanbul at 4:30 p. m. Friday, should have landed in Bucharest three hours later, but at 7:15 o'clock Friday night was struggling against a strong wind and thick clouds in the Balkans.

Peasants See Flames Burst.

Peasants working in the fields reported seeing the machine flying low just before it fell. Suddenly flames burst from the plane. It fell to the ground and exploded. The fire burnt everything within a radius of 25 yards and started a forest fire.

It was thought here the pilot must have lost his way, as the usual route of Istanbul-Bucharest airplanes is along the coast of the Black Sea.

Directors of the Air Transport Co. have gone to the spot and the Bulgarian authorities have opened an investigation.

Radek, Who Received Shaw, Once High in Soviet Politics

Friend of Lenin Has Been in Comparative Oblivion for Four Years; Was One of Bolshevists Negotiating German Peace Pact; Now Writer.

New York, July 26 (A.P.).—Karl Radek, who has reappeared in cable news from Moscow as a member of the committee which received George Barnard Shaw and Lady Astor, has been in comparative oblivion for the past four years.

He belonged to the Trotzky faction and was sent into exile at Vologda along with the many other supporters of the anti-Stalin position in 1927. Two years later Radek publicly confessed his error and was readmitted to the Communist fold, but like Zinoviev, Rakowsky, Kameneff and many other former Trotzkyites, he has never regained the political power he once held.

Radek is now a free-lance journalist who writes for the Russian press. He is probably the most brilliant political writer of the bolshevist era, and was very close to Lenin. In fact, he was aboard the special train bearing Lenin back into Russia from Germany in March, 1917, and in the early days of the bolshevist regime was high in party councils.

He was one of the bolshevists who negotiated the separate peace with Germany at Brest-Litovsk. He made his way secretly back to Germany after the revolution broke out there and as representative of the Russian Communist party took an active part in reorganizing the German Communist party.

Radek was imprisoned in Germany for most of the year 1919. But he was no stranger to prison, as he entered revolutionary agitation in Poland and Lithuania as early as 1904. After the Russian revolution of 1905 Radek was in prison for a year.

He is 46 years old and a native of Lvov, Austrian Poland. During the early part of the great war Radek was in Germany promoting antimilitaristic activities. Later he joined Lenin and other Communists in Switzerland. In 1923 he lost his position on the executive committee of the Communist International and was also removed from the central committee of the Russian Communist party because he was blamed for the failure of Communists to seize power in Germany.

Radek was made director of the Sun Yat-Sen University for Chinese students in Moscow in 1925. This school was organized to train young Chinese in the art of revolution. He was also editor of Pravda, one of the leading journals of Moscow, for some time. But he lost these positions through his support of Trotzky.

New York City Is Dry, Denver Man Discovers

(United Press.)

A statement that he was in New York City two months without seeing a liquor sale, receiving an offer to sell liquor or learning where liquor could be purchased there was made yesterday by Frank L. Ross, Denver gas and electric man, through the Anti-saloon League.

Ross saw only one intoxicated person in the two months, he said. He said he has been up and down all of Broadway at various hours of the day and night, and also has visited resorts, parks and soft-drink places described as speakeasies by casual observers.

He stayed in hotels and rooming houses, he said, but no one connected with them tried to sell him liquor, he said.

Two Fish at Same Time.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., July 26 (U.P.).—Two greedy fish after the same bait came to the same end. C. A. Callendar, who caught them, admitted it was a fish story and, therefore, might be scouted by the less gullible. So when he tells it he takes with him Joe Castillo.

Warning Is Issued On Wood Alcohol

Smell Kills Animals, Yet Many Persons Drink It, Says Society.

New York, July 26 (A.P.).—Warning that animals have been killed by washing them with methanol (methyl alcohol) and even risk death by smelling it, was issued today by the American Chemical Society.

Humans face similar dangers, said this statement, and in addition, so many of them have been drinking the stuff that methanol caused 208 deaths last winter. The report is made by Dr. Carey P. McCord, of the Industrial Health Conservancy Laboratories of Cincinnati.

Methanol, he says, is widely used as an antifreeze fluid, in dry-cleaning industries, hat making, metal working, painting and cabinetmaking. To learn its effects he used this alcohol upon 31 monkeys, 58 rabbits and 176 rats.

Two New York Gunmen Killed in Gang Warfare

New York, July 26 (U.P.).—James Martin, 28, was found dead beside a roadway in the Bronx with a bullet wound in his head and Anthony Leggrio died two hours after an assault by rival gunmen on a Brooklyn street corner. Both were notorious.

While helping unload a liquor cargo from a small boat on the Brooklyn waterfront, John Rosso was shot four times by a policeman, who discovered the rum craft and fired on the runners. The others escaped.

ADVICE FROM DEMOCRATS.

Democratic leaders have found the Hoover moratorium a very difficult problem to handle. To speak against it would involve most of them in hopeless inconsistency because they are pledged to support it in Congress. Moreover, the moratorium has become so popular that few politicians care to disparage it. What can be done to detract from the credit that is being given the President for his foresight and leadership?

Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, Senator Hull, of Tennessee; Representative Lamneck, of Ohio, and other astute Democratic politicians apparently have decided that the way to make political capital out of the situation is to encourage the administration to bestow additional favors upon Europe. "Our era of isolation is over," prophesies Gov. Ritchie. The moratorium, chimes in Senator Hull, is only a beginning. It should be followed as soon as possible "by a broad and constructive program of national and international economic policies dealing with the causes of the depression." Representative Lamneck thinks that the success of the debt holiday should inspire the President to rise in new majesty and strike down those twin iniquities—the tariff and prohibition.

Nothing would be so pleasing to the Democratic party as to see the administration depart from the principles it has heretofore advocated. Inasmuch as President Hoover took the lead in extending economic relief to Germany, Gov. Ritchie asks him to plunge into European politics. Economics and politics, he says, can not be separated. Let the Government ignore Washington's advice about entangling alliances and abandon its traditional policy in a vain effort to straighten out some of the muddled political enigmas of Europe.

On the other hand, Democratic advisers sprinkle eloquent words of praise over the moratorium as a bait to lead the President away from the American tariff policy. If the Government extends relief to Germany, why should not American markets be opened to the whole afflicted world? While the moratorium spirit is on the country let American workingmen be relieved of their jobs so that foreigners may supply our markets. Can it be possible that the administration would save Germany from the brink of disaster, and yet insist on maintaining a tariff? Senator Hull throws up his hands in horror at the thought.

The President is besieged to overreach himself in benevolence to foreign people. Are his Democratic advisers anxious to bring him laurels on a much larger scale? Their motives have root, of course, in the welfare of Democracy. The American people have manifested time after time that they will not tolerate an admixture of American and European politics. Democrats are trying to influence the administration to enmesh itself in European squabbles because such a departure from sound Republican policy would provide effective campaign ammunition in 1932. Political entanglements with European powers would be praised to the sky now, but a year from now they would be torn to shreds.

The situation is the same with regard to the tariff. Senator Hull virtually asks the administration to commit suicide. At a time when the country is in distress and millions are out of work he asks that the party which stands for protection of industry, labor and agriculture to unloose a flood of foreign goods that would overwhelm every American market.

There is no possibility that the success of the moratorium will lead the administration into such absurdities. Foolish advice unheeded usually returns to plague the advisers.

OIL LOOKS TO THE LAW.

The oil producers find solution of the difficulties that have demoralized the industry an onerous undertaking. Plans for voluntary curtailment of production and proration of output were working toward satisfactory adjustment last year until rich new fields were brought in, flooding the market and sending prices to ruinous levels; that is, ruinous for many old fields and small stripper wells.

In the east Texas district wells can be drilled for $10,000 and many of them can produce 20,000 barrels a day. A well running at full capacity can pay for itself in ten days, even with the price of oil at 10 cents a barrel. Producers in this new field are not disposed immediately to shut in such opulent sources of wealth. Profits are large no matter what the price.

Operators in the localities recently opened up say that it is very well for producers in old fields who have been getting their profits for years to talk of curtailment, but in the new fields the income has just begun. Nevertheless, some new fields have been closed, and several of the larger companies are posting artificial prices in a desperate effort to save the industry from ruin. Their efforts have resulted in raising prices to about 40 cents a barrel. Even this, however, is still a long way from the former rate of about $1.30 a barrel.

An investigating committee of the American Institute of Mining Engineers is strongly in favor of legal enforcement of unit operation for oil pools as the only effective measure for the stabilization of the industry. Cooperative development of oil fields through a pooling of drilling costs and production is held to be the one method that can stop competitive drilling.

Attorney General Mitchell has informed oil producers that the President has no authority to declare an embargo against the importation of oil into the United States. Congress has never been disposed to grant an embargo or even a tariff on oil. Yet producers continue to dream of salvation for their industry through prohibition of imports. Even if imports should be restricted the flood of domestic oil would still be great enough to overwhelm the industry. No relief is in sight until production within the United States is brought under control.

Indications are that efforts will be redoubled at the coming sessions of State legislatures to secure more constructive legislation. Unit operation may be made compulsory. Regulation by the proration method may be tightened. Drilling may be restricted. If the oil interests concentrate attention on these measures, while strengthening their own stabilization programs, there is some hope of mitigating their troubles.

FARM TENANTS INCREASE.

For many years agriculture in the United States has been undergoing an evolution. The era of free land has passed, and the period of large scale farming is here. Changing conditions are having a far-reaching effect upon farm life as well as upon agriculture as a great national industry.

The Census Bureau has made public information showing not only that farms are losing their population, but that rural inhabitants are losing their farms. In 1880 nearly 75 per cent of all American farms were operated by their owners. But the 1930 census reveals that only 58 per cent of the farmers are working their own land. Farm tenancy has shown a constant increase. This may be regarded as another indication of the distress that has come upon agriculture.

Since 1920 the increase in tenancy has been especially large. During that period farm values have fallen 30 per cent. Agriculture has been overextended. Many farmers who purchased land at high prices during the World War were forced to sell. Others found agriculture unprofitable because of the world-wide overproduction of staple crops. These conditions accentuated the farm migration and left a greater number of farms in the hands of nonresident owners.

The rise of farm tenancy is lamentable from the social standpoint. Farmers who are temporarily taking a living from a plot of ground do not contribute to community development like permanent residents. They are interested in immediate returns rather than in preservation of the soil; they are more inclined to accept what price they can get for their produce instead of cooperating with their neighbors in marketing agencies. The general result is instability and unsatisfactory conditions of living.

Still more important, perhaps, is the effect of tenancy upon the agricultural situation of the country as a whole. How can a tenant who rents his land agree to curtail acreage for the sake of avoiding overproduction? When a farmer owns his ground and can look forward to higher profits in the future as a reward for holding his crops in check there is a strong incentive for cooperative action. But the tenant feels that he has to make every acre of soil pay for its rent. Because his future tenancy is uncertain he has less interest in farming as a stable industry than in immediate profits.

Doubtless this is one factor in the unsatisfactory response of farmers to advice from the Farm Board. If a still larger portion of American farms fall into the hands of nonresident owners the problem of stabilizing agriculture will unquestionably become more difficult. There is some hope that the Farm Board may be able to organize and educate the agricultural population for collective bargaining if the farm population remains relatively stable, but to direct the efforts of a nation of tenant farmers might prove wholly impractical.

GOVERNMENT COLLEGE MEN.

The large number of positions of a definitely professional character in the Federal Civil Service is generally little appreciated. For this reason President Hoover's new Council of Personnel Administration has in view as one of its chief objects a study that will reveal career opportunities in the Government service. New lines of promotion will also be suggested by the council to open greater opportunities to professional employes.

It is estimated by Thomas E. Campbell, president of the United States Civil Service Commission, that there are at least 18,000 positions under the civil service requiring graduation from college. There are, furthermore, many Government positions not under civil service that are open only to college graduates. As it is the desire of the Government to attract to its departments the highest type of employe, efforts are being made to present the advantages of these positions to college students.

Unusual facilities for research work, improved administration of personnel and a relatively high salary scale make these positions attractive to university students. The value of experience in Government service is noted by the frequent offers from large industries to individuals in Federal positions. In the Bureau of Standards private concerns are continually offering high monetary rewards to lure away the most capable men. There are some, however, who are influenced by other considerations than money alone, with the result that not a few of the greatest scientists in the country are to be found in this department.

The average salary for scientific and professional employes who are stationed in Washington is $3,880. The salary of those in the field is but slightly lower. Coupled with the other advantages of these positions, this rate of pay can not but prove attractive to the modern college-trained man or woman.

COMMON SENSE

From the Minneapolis Journal.

It is a commonplace that this is the age of the specialist. Whether you desire repairs on your tires or your tonsils, your battery or your bank balance, you consult some one who doesn't do anything else but. The field of knowledge as well as of practical affairs has been divided off into water-tight compartments, with the bulkheads tightly closed. Where once the family doctor looked after all your ailments, you must now go down the line in a clinic, and have a dozen doctors pool their guesses. Where once the lawyer was the general business adviser, one now employs one attorney to draw up his will, another to fight the traffic ordinances, another to advise him how to circumvent the statutes and carry on his corporation affairs along the lines of least resistance. Even ministers are divided into preachers, pastors, evangelists and finance specialists.

There is evidence of an increasing revolt against the tyranny of the specialist. On the one hand, the invalid turns to some form of thought cure, or suffers in silence till he goes the way of all the earth. The man in the street ignores the churches and finds his inspiration in Omar's conviction that God's a Good Fellow, and 'twill all be well.

On the other hand, the specialists themselves are discovering that rules of thumb, born of generations of experience, not infrequently are more successful than their wisest theories. Babies permitted to eat anything they want may thrive better than those fed according to the latest dietetic rules. Apple sauce with pork and roast goose is justified by scientific analysis. Diligence, thrift and a friendly spirit beat a correspondence course in salesmanship or the latest book on personality plus as a foundation for business success. The deepest satisfactions of life rest less upon theological dogmas than upon the principles laid down by an insurgent Prophet of ancient time. To do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God.

These reflections are inspired, first of all, by the failure of the wiseacres to steer the world of business successfully through the present crisis in world finance. That we seem to be emerging slowly from the slough of despond is not due to the wisdom of bankers and financial experts, of economists or even of super salesmen and advertisers, whose combined intelligence did not avail to ward off the catastrophe. It is due rather to the fundamental stability of average humanity, and to the simple virtues whereby the common man is able to sit tight and muddle through.

Once more, our thought is stimulated by the rejoinder of Will Rogers to Will Durant in the matter of a philosophy of life. The popularizer of other men's philosophical researches wrote, among others, to the shrewd wisecracker who holds the mirror of his genial fun up to the awkward world of average folk, asking him to state his philosophy of life, to declare what he lives by, wherein he finds his enduring satisfactions, by what yardstick he measures the values of common experience. The reply was illuminating: Don't take anything too seriously!

In a word, live simply, get all the fun you can out of the simple virtues, the common joys. Bear up like a man under the burdens and disappointments of the common lot. Trust God and life and folks. Don't let the theorists, whether of religion, or business, or statecraft, get your goat. Enjoy the blessings of modern civilization, but don't be dependent on them—automobiles or radios or mechanical refrigerators or kitchenette apartments. The deepest lessons of life are the fruit of ages of living. The things that are common to everybody are more fundamental and important than the things that are peculiar to anybody.

The specialist himself, despite his brilliance and learning, must in the last analysis test his theories against the common life. The wisdom of the old wives may outlast the speculations of the most daring theorist. "Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."

POST HASTE.

With temporary surcease from impending world cataclysm we trust you enjoyed Sunday once more as a day of rest.

The luckiest word Queen Helen has had in some time is the official announcement that there is no question about her divorce from Carol being complete and final.

If this war keeps on we shall be lining up on the curb to see which taxi offers the biggest bonus for passengers.

Chile should realize that recall of presidents by undergraduates is a reflection upon the capacity of their elders to conduct a democracy.

Tedious tariff details are entirely too confining for a man of the world who likes golf as well as Ambassador Fletcher.

The sister States of Texas and Oklahoma should be reminded that even Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson have learned to play bridge together peacefully.

Add similes: As brave as the man who gave a 10 per cent tip with a 10 cent taxi fare. As detestable as subtitles on magazine fiction.

Wait, you have only heard one side. Possibly the Denver wife, who says she was beaten twice a week for fifteen years, burned the toast with equal regularity.

Chile and Argentina can't blame it on the heat—they're having winter down there.

"Ford denies that any one can predict the time of business recovery." But whom is he contradicting?

Mexico will resort to the coinage of silver exclusively. Well, China found Mexican dollars useful for currency for many years.

Possibly it must be considered as progress that President Uriburu of Argentina is exiling his political opponents instead of executing them.

Even if not a candidate himself Al Smith is a good enough politician to know that the day he comes out for Roosevelt his political prestige drops 50 per cent.

It will require three whole weeks to get the Post-Gatty book on the market. This delay is inexplicable unless the boys expect to write it themselves.

Making gold contracts payable in silver dollars on 24 hour notice is called monetary reform by Mexico. Some will be unkind enough to consider it partial confiscation.

The longer Charlie Curtis takes to decide and the more speculation there is about it, the more it will help the national Republican ticket—if he decides he wants his name on it.

MODERN ALADDIN PUSHES A BUTTON.

When you enter the elevators in the newest skyscrapers now, says the Wall Street Journal, you will no longer need anticipate an admonishment from the operator to "watch your step" because he hasn't stopped the car precisely on the level; neither need you fret while he struggles with a gate or door that sticks. For the completely automatic operation of elevators now being installed in the latest buildings places the human element at the irreducible minimum. For example, when the up or down button of the Westinghouse elevators in the new RCA building is pressed on any floor, the impulse is automatically transmitted to the car next to pass that particular floor. Mechanism not only stops the car at exactly the floor level, but also opens the doors. Manual operation is reduced simply to the operator's seeing that passengers are safely in or out of the car before the doors are closed The operator can, likewise, press a button which will enable the already filled car to complete its trip without further stops. These and other automatic features contribute, of course, to the saving of considerable time by passengers in getting to and from their offices.

Mothers Would Drown Girl Babies Still if Public Opinion Approved.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

Do you know the real cause of the last great war—and the next one?

In Oklahoma a deputy sheriff came upon two Mexican youths who had purchased arms to use in self-defense.

The youths were innocent of offensive intent or action, but the sight of their guns frightened the deputy and he shot and killed them both.

That is a perfect example of the hysteria that makes war an ever-present threat in Europe.

Europe today is an armed camp.

Officers with spurs and swords swagger in every cafe and dominate every public scene.

Soldiers mount guard on every frontier; troops under arms outnumber the armies of 1914 by more than a million; there is desperate competition in the building of war vessels, fighting planes and fortifications.

Meanwhile the people groan beneath the burden of taxation; men out of work face the future with ever-increasing despair, and red revolution draws nearer day by day.

Fear does it.

Statesman and peasant, banker and soldier, all alike are mad with fear.

Nerves are raw; hysteria is in the air; men live in hourly dread of the shot that will break the tension and begin the mad business of destruction.

Any hour of any day may see the beginning of a conflict that will leave Europe in ashes.

How in the name of Heaven can it be prevented?

Treaties? They are scraps of paper when men fear for their lives.

Disarmament? Did men fight less when their only weapons were bows and arrows, spears or clubs?

America never has armed for war in time of peace, yet no generation since the Revolution has escaped the call to arms.

War can be stopped, completely and for all time, but no miracle of statesmanship can do it.

The only hope of the world is mental disarmament.

Why is it no longer necessary for the buyer to beware?

Because civilized men frown on cheating.

Why do men no longer challenge one another to fight duels?

Because public opinion outlawed duelling.

What made an end of slavery?

Civilized public opinion turned against it.

What ended child labor in civilized communities?

Decent men could no longer tolerate it.

What ended the legal torture of criminals?

Public opinion demanded that it stop.

The same influence and the same process will end war, and nothing else can.

As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he; and when mankind becomes intelligent enough to hate war and scorn its makers, armed conflict will seem as intolerable as cannibalism.

When public opinion outlawed witch-hanging, no laws or treaties were needed to outlaw it.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

The Tragedy of Wheat.

Minneapolis Journal.

For two years pleas for a wheat acreage reduction met in the Southwest the retort that there was money in growing winter wheat in Western Kansas and the Texas Panhandle, no matter how low the price might go. The same interests that had begged for stabilization were declaring in 1929 and 1930 that any farm price above 35 cents a bushel meant a profit for them, albeit a slight one. Why, they wanted to know, should they be called upon to sacrifice this slight profit for the benefit of strangers in the Northwest, growing spring wheat at necessarily higher production costs?

So the Southwest kept right on planting, until this year Kansas alone produced more than 200,000,000 bushels of winter wheat. That and other factors (not the least of them the Farm Board's accumulation of its huge surplus) have brought down the value of the grain to the point where the farm price in Kansas recently has been, not 35 cents, but 20 cents.

And the resultant screams have rolled across the prairies toward Washington in ever increasing volume. Something must be done, and at once, shout the men who, only a little while ago, were scorning suggestions that they protect the value of their own product by cutting instead of increasing production.

Nominating Roosevelt.

Atlanta Constitution.

Discussing the probability of the nomination by the Democrats of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, Mark Sullivan says that "if Gov. Roosevelt remains a little while longer as the only condidate in an active, Nation-wide sense, it will be impossible to deny him the nomination."

As a matter of fact his nomination is already practically assured. It requires but little knowledge of national political conditions to know that no man yet mentioned as a possible opponent, can defeat him.

Even though the New York governor, who for the past several years has spent much of his time in Georgia, has not announced his candidacy, at least a third of the States are already practically committed to send delegations to the national convention favorable to his candidacy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Unusual Accident in Which Trainmen Are Cremated by Gasoline From a Motor Car—and a Still More Unusual Verdict.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A coroner's jury has just returned a direct verdict placing all responsibility upon the crew of a "crack" train in a recent grade-crossing accident, which cost the lives of two trainmen and injury to another.

It was a most unusual accident. Three enginemen, after plowing into a stalled automobile, were sprayed with liquid fire when the gasoline tank blew up. In their frenzy two men leaped from the cab of the locomotive to their death.

How can it be justly said by this jury that these men are to be blamed for the crash? Testimony at the inquiry from eyewitnesses to the accident testified that the girl motorist approached at approximately 35 miles an hour and stalled upon the tracks after being caught between the gates. Investigation revealed the warning bell and crossing gates to be in good condition and operating perfectly.

Witnesses also testified that the engineer had seen the crash to be inevitable and had set the emergency brakes, causing the giant locomotive to rock and sway. A much greater disaster, perhaps, would have occurred had the brakes been applied too suddenly. These men evidently acted to the best of their ability.

Motorists must learn to be careful at grade-crossings. "Stop, look and listen" must be their code before proceeding to cross railroad rights-of-way. The tons of steel that convey human lives upon the railroads and thundering down the rails at a "mile-a-minute" clip, can not be expected to stop and wait for motor cars to get off the right of way.

Although this unusual accident was a reversal to what generally happens in a grade-crossing accident, these two members of the crew which had control of the crack "flyer" died heroically.

Socialism Has Done Nothing to Help the World—Individualism Has Done All.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To what agency or influence are we indebted for the countless amenities of modern civilization? They are commonplace today, but each one was a startling innovation at first. The steam engine which has been hauling freight and carrying passengers for so many years—the innumerable devices which make electricity available for so many purposes—the internal combustion engine which drives the automobile and the airplane, and many others too numerous to mention.

They are all the results of individual effort, personal initiative. Collectivism, socialism has had no part in bringing them about. Not one can be named which is the result of socialistic effort. There is one instance of a prominent member of the Socialist party, who was engaged in investigation, who did very valuable work, but he was a highly paid employe of a large utility company. Socialism had no part in what he did.

Tribute to the Late Rev. H. J. Councilor From the Filipino Club.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have just learned with much regret of the death of the Rev. H. J. Councilor, assistant pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. We sympathize with his family, relatives, and friends in this sorrow. The contribution he made toward the organization of young people's societies can not be estimated; the efforts he exerted in reviving religious groups will always be appreciated. Unions like those of the Baptist young people, the Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and others will miss him greatly. The inspiration he gave to youth, the challenge he presented to them, and his unselfish service to his fellow men, even at the cost of his own life—these made the Rev. Mr. Councilor a beloved friend and a real Christian.

Filipinos who have heard his instructive sermons many a time are ever grateful to this man of God; for to him there was no East nor West.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

IN SAVAGE TIMES.

I wonder in the olden days of club and claw and nail,
When might was right and out of luck were sickly men and frail,
Before the world was civilized and courtesy was unknown
And strength was all man had to have to stay upon his throne,
Just what they said and what they did when for an hour or more
They found themselves confronted by a conversational bore.
I wonder, worn and weary, did the stronger man submit
Or grab his club and strike one blow and put an end to it.

They must have had those tedious folks in those old savage years
Who cannot recognize the sign when weariness appears,
But I have seen no word of them in all historians write Nor what men dared to suffer for the sake of being polite.
When hairy cavemen cornered were by babbling bores of old
Who held them by their leopard skins the while their tales they told.
I wonder did they let them live or swing the snickersnee
And say: "That is an end of that.
Henceforth you'll silent be."

I do not write in bitterness. But here I argue still.
The conservation bore exists because good men won't kill.
He takes advantage of the code, which teaches, wrong or right,
A gentleman must suffer much and always be polite.
Nor frown nor sigh can shake him off, safe-sheltered by the law;
He keeps his victims cornered till their nerves are fretted raw.
And since we now are civilized,
there's nothing to be done
But shake the head and sigh and yawn and let him babble on.

SHENANDOAH PARK WORK PROGRESSING

Engineers, Mappers, Timber Cruisers Establish Greene County Headquarters.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 26.—Sixteen engineers, timber cruisers and mappers broke camp at Doylesville yesterday preparatory to establishing headquarters at Stanardsville, Greene County seat, where they will spend the remainder of the summer in that section of the proposed Shenandoah National Park.

The crew will determine boundary lines for individual properties within the park area, classify land and cruise timber. They have completed their work in the park territory in six counties, with the exception of Greene and a small portion of Albemarle. They will finish the northern strip of this county in about a week and expect to have Greene County done by the middle of October.

Following close behind this party of experts are the appraisers appointed by the judges of three circuit courts of this area. These place a value on all of the land in the park.

Thomas L. Farrar, Charlottesville member of the State Conservation and Development Commision, which has charge of the park work, visited the Doylesville camp yesterday and consulted with W. H. Stoneburner, now in charge of timber cruising in the park.

"The park movement is more alive today than it has ever been before," said Mr. Farrar, who looks forward to the time when in the not distant future it will be taken over by the Federal Government. When this is done, he stated, and the 3,500 individual tracts of land become Federal property, the present owners will be allowed to remain by agreement on their land for life.

The first survey work was begun in the park in 1926, and the classifying of land and cruising of timber started in March, 1930.

Meanwhile, the Federal Government has already let contracts for the Skyland drive, 40-mile highway along the top of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and expects to have at least a temporary surface on the road by cold weather.

NEW PONY DIRIGIBLE IS TESTED IN FRANCE

Novel Airship With Crew of Two Can Be Housed in Airplane Hangar.

Paris, July 26 (U.P.).—While still opposed to the building of huge rigid dirigibles of the Zeppelin and Akron type, the French government has had constructed and successfully tested a novel pony dirigible which represents the maximum of fighting or commercial efficiency yet attained by small rigid airships.

This new dirigible, destined for the French navy, is capable of about 60 miles an hour, and so easily managed that it can be operated by a single pilot and his mechanic.

No other military force possesses such a handy airship, capable of carrying 1 1-3 tons of bombs or air mail. The gasbags have a capacity of 3,400 cubic meters, and the ship is driven by two 120-horsepower motors.

This new ship, known as the Zodiac VII, is so small that it can be housed in the average airplane hangar. Its cabin is built into the framework of the trilobe balloon, so as to give great rigidity to the whole ship. This permits it to turn in a distance of twice its own length, at full speed, without danger.

The Zodiac VII will be able to land without a ground crew, for it has a pneumatic bumper which can be replaced by pontoons if the airship is to be used over water. These will permit safe landing, even in rough seas.

The French believe that airships would have certain advantages for mail carrying to the African colonies over airplanes and it is possible that the Zodiac VII may make a test flight for that purpose.

Highway Brakes Stop Automobiles at Crossing

Shreveport, La., July 26 ((A.P.).—J. F. McDowell, Shreveport man, has applied for a patent on a new safety device that stops automobiles as they approach railroad crossings.

The device consists of a set of rails on the highway on either side of the crossing. An approaching train throws a switch which activates an electro-magnet and hydraulic cylinders which gradually cause the rails to spread, stopping an automobile driving astride them.

Automobiles are forced to approach the crossings slowly because of the rails.

MINISTER SAYS GOD HAD HAND IN SLUMP

Lutheran Conference Ends at Massanutta Springs in Virginia.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 26.—"It looks as though God had something to do with the depression, because it came just at a time when the world was being told that God should be 'scrapped,' and should have nothing more to do with Him," declared Dr. E. P. Pfatteicher, Philadelphia, president of the Pennsylvania Ministerium, at the closing session today of the Lutheran conference and training school at Massanutta Springs.

"I think," said Dr. Pfatteicher, "that my brother ministers resent with me the fact that there is a feeling abroad that the minds of those of us who are dealing with the New Testament are old fogies and have stopped thinking. The quandary of the minister today would be an apt subject for a magazine article.

"We must fight the good fight for Christian character and Christian conscience. Goodness and contentment are necessary. When there is a warfare on earth a moratorium is declared in the church. As we think of the depression upon us one of the serious thoughts which come to us is that those upon whom God has committed a great trust have been gambling in the stock markets and living in luxury. The return of material wealth and resources will not come to pass until the return of spiritual resources."

Changing Records Upheld by Court

Sustains Act of Clerk in Erasing Data on Deed and Entering Lien.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 26.—That a court clerk has the right to change a record was a part of the decision rendered yesterday in the Federal District Court here by Judge H. C. McDowell in the suit of personal representatives of J. C. Trewett, deceased, against Mrs. Ruby Snaveley, of Wythe County.

Records of the case showed that Mrs. Snaveley obtained a judgment for alimony and costs against her husband; that the husband deeded a farm to Trewett, who died without placing the transfer on record. After his death the deed was sent to the clerk's office for recordation. Hearing of this Mrs. Snaveley's attorney sought to have the lien made a matter of record to antedate that of the transfer of the farm. Mrs. Josephine Schaeffer, deputy clerk, erased the recordation, entered the judgment and then rerecorded the deed.

In his decision, Judge McDowell held that Mrs. Schaeffer had a right to change the record and that Mrs. Snaveley should recover the amount of her judgment and costs.

SENATE CANDIDATES MEET IN ARLINGTON

Three Mass Gatherings Will Be Held in Last Week of Campaign.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Entering the last week of the campaign for the Democratic nomination for the State Senate, which will be determined at the primary Tuesday, August 4, voters of Arlington County will have opportunity this week to learn from the candidates themselves, Charles T. Jesse, of Arlington County, and John W. Rust, of Fairfax County, what they stand for.

First mass meeting of the week will be held tonight under auspices of the Thrifton Village Improvement League in the parish hall of Grace Episcopal Church. Second meeting will be tomorrow afternoon at the Lyon Park Community House under auspices of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County. Third meeting will be Friday evening in auditorium of the Cherrydale Firemen's Hall under auspices of the Cherrydale Citizens Association.

Reports to the effect that Thomas D. Baille, of Clarendon, who was defeated at the County Republican convention Friday night for the nomination for the county board, would run as an independent candidate are absolutely without foundation, declared Baille yesterday.

"For the last 30 years I have adhered closely to the Republican party and have had sufficient experience to accept defeat just as I would a victory. I have no sympathy for an independant.

"Today I shall withdraw my filing for the office at the courthouse and will stand by the nominees of the party," he said.

Meeting in the firemen's hall Saturday evening, the Cherrydale Fire Department elected the following officers: Arthur Kidwell, captain of Company No. 1; lieutenant, Carvey Shanta; Company No. 2, Capt. Roy Sha, lieutenant, Carl Havener.

It was voted to purchase 25 uniforms for members of the department. Chief Reese O'Neil and President E. C. Johnson were appointed as a special committee to meet at the Ballston Firemen's Hall Tuesday night to discuss plans for the annual carnival under auspices of the Arlington-Fairfax Firemen's Association.

Annual carnival of the Arlington County Social Club for benefit of its building fund will be held at the intersection of Wilson boulevard and Clements avenue at Ballston. Besides the usual carnival booths there will be a popularity contest, band concert, home cooked food, many nightly features and dancing.

Monthly meeting of the Ballston Citizens' Association scheduled for tomorrow evening has been postponed indefinitely.

J. R. Malloch, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the annual carnival of the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemen's Association, announces there will be a special meeting of the committee tomorrow night at the Ballston Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

The Potomac Association, including churches in the City of Alexandria and the counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun, Fauquier, Prince William and Stafford, will meet in the Bush Tabernacle in Purcellville, August 5 and 6.

Hamilton, Ketoctin, Purcellville and Round Hill churches will unite in entertainment.

Clarendon Rebekah Lodge No. 28 will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the Odd Fellows hall at Clarendon.

Eleventh annual camp meeting of the Nazarene Church will be held at Park Lane, Arlington county, beginning Wednesday evening and continuing through Sunday, August 9.

ALEXANDRIA TO ASK TERMINAL MEETING

Trolley Station North of Pennsylvania Avenue to Be Sought.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Representatives from Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties will, within the next week or ten days, appear before the Public Utilities Commission of Washington relative to a site for a terminal in Washington for trolley lines between Alexandria and the Capital. J. William May, of Alexandria, is chairman of the committee and he plans to arrange the conference as soon as he receives word from all to whom invitations to attend have been extended.

The Alexandria delegation will urge a terminal north of Pennsylvania avenue, according to Mr. May. A site south of the Avenue has been offered, but this is not considered satisfactory. An early decision is expected, since the present terminal at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue is soon to be torn down, it is stated.

The Alexandria-Washington Buses, which company has been granted a charter to operate between the two cities, will be given a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission August 15, according to a statement by Charles Henry Smith, attorney for the new corporation. The company intends to begin operations with eight buses, and it is understood some of the equipment of the Mayflower Sightseeing Co., of Washington, will be utilized.

Mayor Edmund F. Ticer has stated that the company has not as yet made application to the city council for permission to use the streets of Alexandria, and it is probable that such application will not be made until after the council reconvenes in September.

Two Alexandria cases are set for hearing tomorrow in the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Judge Luther B. Wray presiding. In one Bernard P. Brooks, of the Triangle Barbecue and Service Station, of Fairfax County, just west of Alexandria, is charged with selling liquor, and it is reported the Government will ask for a permanent injunction to close the place for one year.

An injunction is also sought against Walter Smith, who leases the building at 111-117 South Pitt street, and W. D. Duncan, it being alleged that Federal agents last October purchased liquor from Duncan at the above address. Smith, it is stated, had no connection with the alleged sales.

Robert C. Douglas, 26 years old, and Louis T. Ervin, 21, of Gaffney, S. C., arrested in Alexandria Friday by Policeman Hicks on the strength of a telegram signed by Zeb W. Wheelcher, sheriff, Cherokee, S. C., were turned over to the South Carolina authorities yesterday and taken back to that State. Alexandria police were not informed as to charges against the men.

There are 17 Alexandria young men among 750 attendin the citizens' military training camp at Fort Eustis, and yesterday being "parents day" at the camp, several Alexandria parents went to the fort to visit their sons. The local boys are Herman H. Amorky, Louis F. Bohraus, David R. Book, Carl J. Mess, jr., Joseph R. Coleman, Charles H. Fletcher, jr., Cedric C. Reid, Charles H. Simms, George H. Jeffries, Stevens S. Petry, Thomas H. Peyton, John W. Sullivan, Winton W. Cole, Redmond H. Crouch, Charles B. Emmons, Thomas Sommers, jr., and John W. Weaver.

Rosa Padilla Visits Exiled King in Paris

Former Envoy's Daughter Says Alfonso Still Is Sportsman.

OUT of strife-ridden Spain comes a gay note reminiscent of the former regime, carried in the news from Paris of a visit recently paid there by Senorita Rosa Padilla, daughter of the former Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Padilla.

Senorita Padilla went to Paris some time ago from San Sebastian, where her family is now living, accompanied by her cousin, one of the attractive Satrustegui girls who passed a winter in Washington several years ago. While in the French Capital they were guests of Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of the United States Ambassador, and of Mrs. Robert Pell, Jr., wife of the secretary to Ambassador Edge, both of whom Senorita Padilla had known in Washington, and many parties were planned for the two girls who are well acquainted with the American colony in Paris.

Though Senorita Rosa left the troubles of her country behind her, her heart was still with Spain, for during her visit in Paris she and her cousin were received by their former king in his exile home at Fontainebleau. The Padilla family has for many years been very close to King Alfonso and during the summers he and the royal family, which had its summer palace in San Sebastian, recently received the Padillas who were included in the royal party at the races, bull fights and more intimate affairs.

Senorita Padilla writes that she found the king worn and sad, but still his gracious, charming self, smiling when she told him of the familiar activities among the summer colony in the Spanish resort. His good sportsmanship which never failed him in athletic contests is standing him in good stead now, she said, and the French people feel it an honor to have the exiled king choose their country for his temporary home.

Senorita Padilla and her cousin have returned to Spain and are again with their families. The former Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, Count de Montefuerte, who sailed last week from New York, has joined his wife and children at the home of the Countess de Montefuerte's parents in San Sebastian, where they will remain until later in the year. The mother of Countess de Montefuerte was one of the ladies in waiting to the former Queen Victoria, and so among that small group is found a deep and personal feeling of the strife and change of the country.

M. Etienne Lardy, Counselor of the Swiss Legation, will arrive the middle of the week from Switzerland, where he accompanied Mme. Lardy and their children several weeks ago. M. Lardy will act as charge d'affaires of Switzerland during the absence of the minister.

Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, jr., who went to New York several days ago, has gone to Delaware Water Gap for a visit of two weeks. Later she will go to Newport to spend the remainder of the summer with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss.

Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough and his son, Mr. Brice Goldsborough, have gone to Biddefordpool, Me., to spend the remainder of the summer.

Mrs. Henry Brooke Gilpin, of Winchester, Va., who recently returned from Europe, is now in Canada, where she will be joined shortly by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin, and their two young sons, who have also returned after spending several months abroad. They went first to their home near Boyce, Va. Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin was formerly Miss Isabel Tyson, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence D. Tyson and the late Senator Tyson.

Mrs. Reginald Cochet entertained a small party at the dinner dance on the Shoreham Terrace Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason Remey, whose marriage took place a fortnight ago in Paris, are spending their honeymoon motoring through the chateau district of France, making their headquarters at their apartment which is located not far from the American Embassy in the French capital.

Upon their return to this country they will reside at the charming home built recently by Mr. Remey on Massachusetts avenue. With this in view Mr. Remey's bachelor establishment is being considerably enlarged. Mrs. Remey was formerly Mrs. Karl Klemm.

Lieut. and Mrs. Joseph F. Dahlgren, the latter formerly Miss Anne Huntly Gordon, of Baltimore and Washington, have returned from France, where Lieut. Dahlgren has been stationed, and are in Annapolis, where he will be on duty and where they have taken a house. Mr. Douglas Huntly Gordon, the brother of Mrs. Dahlgren, will also take up his residence in the Brice House, Annapolis, in September, having been made president of St. John's College. His mother, Mrs. J. Wilmer Biddle, is spending the summer in Europe.

Miss Elizabeth Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Atwater Kent, and Mr. James Laurens Van Alen, whose marriage will take place August 8 at Bar Harbor, will spend their honeymoon in France.

Mrs. Julius Peyser was hostess to a small group at luncheon Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. Simpson In Jamestown, R. I.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson and their daughters, Frances and Betsy Anne, have arrived at Jamestown, R. I., where they will spend the rest of the summer.

IT is not necessary for The American Oil Company to make wild claims for a regular gasoline. The American Oil Company makes a regular gas of superb quality--ORANGE AMERICAN GAS. It is refined from the finest obtainable oils--under the most modern and efficient refining methods. It sells everywhere at regular gas price--but its day by day performance is a continuous demonstration of how good a regular gas can be.

But The American Oil Company does not say that ORANGE AMERICAN GAS will equal the performance and economy of a true special motor fuel such as AMOCO-GAS.

AMOCO-GAS, the original special motor fuel, possesses qualities which can never be duplicated in regular or straight gasoline. It is sold at a slightly higher price than regular gas--but the additional cost at the pump is returned to you many times over--by greater mileage, by lessened repair bills and by the increased trade-in value of your car.

So we can afford to be open-minded. We produce two excellent gases at two distinct prices. And whichever you choose--you are assured of completely satisfactory performance. Get one of them today--at most good service stations.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

NEW television corporations are being organized daily in Delaware and other States, in a frantic rush to get in on the present bonanza of television stock selling. Regiments of stock salesmen are being hired to call on sucker lists and sell securities under the pretense of letting the investor share in legendary profits of "this new billion-dollar industry," O. H. Caldwell, former Federal Radio Commissioner warns.

Even reputable Wall street firms are making open inquiries among radio men, seeking television companies to promote. Meanwhile the Department of Justice, the New York district attorney's office and the Post-office Department are watching some of the high-pressure stock-selling methods now underway, with a purpose of action. Already the use of the mails by several television "tipster sheets" has been stopped.

"Before any layman takes hard-earned dollars and invests them in television securities, he should inform himself to some extent about the status of the television art and the likelihood of improvement, and should also insist on witnessing a television demonstration to observe the crudities of present television for himself," Mr. Caldwell declared.

"The basic principle of all present television machines was invented back in 1887 by a Russian named Nipkow, and except to apply recent details, the basic principle remains the same. This point-by-point method involves the sending of enormously high frequencies over radio or wire circuits, and even with half-million cycles per second, the picture will be something like that of a poor newspaper halftone, and far less satisfying than a home movie.

"Present systems are all surprisingly identical in method and results produced, and all seem limited to the showing of coarse outlines of a single face, or at best two faces. One's 'interest' in watching such television images of limited detail quickly subsides after a minute or so, and those who have witnessed demonstrations of all the principal systems do not feel that the flickering television image is yet more than a scientific curiosity, and is still far from being a medium of entertainment or amusement.

"Television has been up against a stone wall of limitations as far as future developments of present methods is concerned. And despite the herculean efforts expended upon it, little advance has been made in five years. Television of motion-picture quality still awaits a new inventor with a brand-new idea for transmitting images, replacing the present complex point-by-point method," Mr. Caldwell concludes.

JACK SMART, long the "Mr." of Columbia's "Mr. and Mrs." program, now has a "Mrs." in real life. The bride is Alice Coy, actress last seen on Broadway in "Up and U."

"Murder on Forty-seventh street," will be dramatized during the Crime Club period tonight (WMAL, 8 o'clock).

A Wagnerian opera, "Tristan and Isolde," conducted by Furtwaengler, will be broadcast direct from Beyreuth in Germany early in August. The Wireless Military Band will be heard from London this afternoon at 3:35 o'clock over WRC.

Not to be outdone by Columbia the N. B. C. also announces a broadcast overseas from Salzburg, Austria. The latter will attempt to pick up a portion of Cimarosa's opera, "Il Matrimonio Segreto," next Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

A NEW series begins this morning at 8:15 o'clock over the WEAF net with the introduction of Tom Waring's dance orchestra. Tom is a brother of Fred and traveled with Waring's Pennsylvanians ten years before striking out for himself.

Mid-summer Pan American concert will be broadcast tonight from the Hall of the Americas (NAA, 9 o'clock, WRC 10 o'clock).

A NEW program, "Paris Night Life" will be heard at 6:45 o'clock tonight over the WJZ network, featuring Princess Ivanova Obelensky, of the former Russian Imperial Court "as patroness." Though exactly what the duties of a patroness are on the air, we can not say.

Ben Bernie brings to his fellow artists about the studios the tale of a rustic visitor to New York.

The visitor made a desperate run for the ferryboat as it was leaving the slip. He made a mighty leap, and covered the intervening space, then fell sprawling to the deck, where for two minutes he lay stunned. At last he sat up feebly, and stared dazedly over the quarter-mile expanse of water between boat and shore.

"Holy hop-toads!" he exclaimed in a tone of profound awe, "What a jump!"

Jane Corbin INTERPRETS the MODE

New York, July 26.

NOW naturally, being a Fashion Cricket, 'n' going around to all the fashionable places in all the fashionable seasons, I'm somewhat more observing than other women. I have to be all eyes and ears to gather the fashion information that I write for my deah public—and I've never found Fashion Cricketing a more fascinating pursuit than this year.

Not only are the frocks lovely, the hats piquantly charming, the gatherings socially important and distinctly entertaining, but the women themselves more beautiful and—we-l-l-l-l, youthful! Even those with white hair, my deahs! For a time, the reason defied analysis, but I finally placed the credit where it should be—on the women's complexions.

There just don't seem to be any glaringly painted or harshly powdered complexions these days—and while these effects may have been striking, they were hard and old. How old you'll never realize until you see a gathering of the fresh-faced, young, natural looking fashionable women today. There's a vast difference my deahs, between a natural 1931 complexion and the natural complexion of grandmother's day. O-h-h-h-h but her skin used to burn and chap and peel and redden at the most inopportune times—and if she ever was so brazen as to apply a hint of talcum to her dainty, or rough-textured nose the night the best beau called, it either stood out like pebbles or slipped and slid and blew away long before he hitched his horse to the fence across the way. And oh my, the condition of that poor face after the ten-mile crosscountry marathon in the teeth of the night breeze!

But today? Thanks to the modern methods of skin care and make-up, we see complexions baby fresh, velvety, smooth—and we note with pride the doing away of the graceless powder puff and the shiny-nose-in-spite-of-every-thing!

* * * *

We just know we must be lovely in our Sunday night frocks—and most of us hope sincerely that we won't fly to pieces while we're being lovely for that occasion! Honestly, now, I'm not fooling, that has been a great fault with past Sunday night styles. But now that the first thrill of lovely Sunday night things has passed, we're combining practical charm with beauty. See what I mean? Isn't this frock I sketched for you today adorable, made as it is of white chiffon, with cobwebby white lace? Its little ruffles are charmingly decorative, as is the attached bolero effect, but it is perfectly practical in its absence of fluttery gadgets that charm the eye but do get most woefully in the way if you want to do anything—as who doesn't, these amusing, busy days?

* * * *

Leave the drippy, floaty things to those who can sit around and be perfect pictures of useless fluff! I warn you, as one who knows that you'll be left to look like a picture while every one else has the fun, if you will dress uselessly!

And speaking of usefulness in a lovely guise—don't you see the possibilities in a smart lace bonnet like this, which, when it's tired of being just plain lace, adds a perky little black satin brim?

* * * *

Yokes, buttons, gold mesh, monograms, seed pearls, openwork, fagoting—o-o-o-h, why go on? I'll bet you never imagined all the different kinds of hand work there are in the world. And the lovely thing about it is that these hand touches make your clothes so individual and attractive nowadays. And fun? Just send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet, and find out for yourself!

* * * *

And then there's the weekly Dare fashion letter. Look for it in The Sunday Washington Post.

Au revoir!

Culbertson on Contract

by Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

THE FORCING SYSTEM DEFINED.

THERE are three characteristic features that sharply distinguish the Approach Forcing System in Contract from other systems. They are:

First. The use as first choice of the Approach suit bids in decided preference to no-trumps.

Second. The use of the Forcing two bid for the Opening bidder and of Forcing Takeouts for either partner.

Third. The use of the Direct method in preference to Ace-showing for Slam bidding.

The Approach Method. When a hand offers a choice between an Opening trump bid and a notrump, the suit (be it even a four-card minor) and not the notrump, should as a rule be bid first. This principle applies with hands containing singletons, as well as with those containing unprotected two or three-card suits. This apparently simple principle is of even greater importance in Contract than in Auction and carries with it as a consequence some radical changes in the bidding methods of both partners. For instance, four-card suits headed as low as by an A J 10, A Q or K Q 9 or five-card suits headed by a K or Q J, are bid freely and thus increase tremendously the game-making or game-saving range of hands. The requirement for adequate trump support is in turn made higher than usual. Three small trumps or a Queen small is not considered "adequate support." Partner should try to deny such support with some other trump or Takeout with notrumps, unless the first suit is rebid.

Another important consequence of the Approach Principle is that the Responding Hand takes out with weaker hands than in other systems.

In the vital question of choice between two biddable suits, the most decided preference is given in the Forcing System to the longer suit.

Forcing Bids. The principle of Forcing bids, which gave the name to the system in Contract, is nothing but a logical extension of the Approach Principle and other methods already developed for Auction. In Contract where a game or Slam must be contracted for in order to score it, there are two situations which require that the bidding be kept unconditionally open by partner.

First Situation. Opening trump bids of two are Forcing. Such a two bid is a gigantic Approach bid and shows about five honor tricks distributed in three suits. Partner's responses are: (1) must not pass, (2) can not raise the bid suit unless holding at least three trumps to an honor and one honor trick, (3) failing trump support can bid some other five-card suit, if headed by at least a Q J and one honor trick in the hand, (4) holding a blank should bid two notrumps (minimum response), (5) holding one and a half honor tricks should bid three notrumps. Should partner himself hold a good hand, he need not jump the bid, since after the very powerful hand shown by the Opening bidder, the bidding must be kept open until a game contract is reached.

Second Situation. Any Jump Takeout in a suit by partner of the Opening bidder is a Forcing bid, provided such a "jump" is below a game contract. Forcing Takeouts show about three honor tricks (in addition to partner's two and a half). Hence, after partner's Forcing Takeout the Opening bidder can not pass. If unable to support the partner's suit or rebid his own, his minimum response is the required number of notrumps. The extraordinary feature of all Forcing bids is that the bid suit may be of minimum strength, even a good four-card suit, which absolutely prohibits partner from raising on less than three fairly good trumps. The underlying idea of a Forcing Takeout is to find out without risk of partner passing whether he can support a suit, failing which there always remains the notrump (Approach Principle).

Example of the Forcing Takeout:

Opening Hand	Responding Hand
♠ 7 5	♠ A J 4 3 2
♥ K 10 9	♥ Q J 8
♦ A K J 9 4	♦ Q 6
♣ 9 8 7	♣ A Q 6

Bidding: West, "one diamond;" East, "two spades!" A Forcing bid. West, "two notrumps."

A minimum response. East, "three notrumps."

Certain writers use a jump suit Overcall of an opponent's bid as a Force. I can not agree with this, as I believe it too risky to force a response from partner in face of the considerable strength shown by the opponent.

Slam Bidding: The direct method of Slam bidding instead of the unjustly popular "cue bidding" way, is the third important characteristic of the Forcing Principle. Instead of using a confusing convention to show Aces and often with an indefinite amount of tricks, we prefer to show a definite number of tricks in the belief that Aces will be, as a rule, automatically inferred from the bidding.

Today's Pointer.

A Small Slam should be bid on a hand which offers a slightly better than even chance of making the twelfth trick. When vulnerable somewhat greater risk can be taken, because the reward is greater.

Grand Slams should be bid rarely and only when the hand offers at least a three to one expectancy of fulfillment.

(Copyright, 1931.)

"Sticky" Cinnamon Rolls.

1 cake compressed yeast
¼ cup water, lukewarm
4 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
2 cups milk, lukewarm
5 tablespoons fat
6 cups flour.

Crumble yeast and add water and sugar. Mix until creamy. Add salt, egg, milk, fat and half the flour. Beat 3 minutes. Add rest of flour and knead until soft and elastic. If the dough is too sticky to handle, it requires a little more flour, about one-half cup. Place dough in greased bowl and cover. Set in warm place and let stand until it has doubled in bulk. Roll out dough on a floured board until one-third inch thick. Add sugar mixture.

Sugar Mixture.

1½ cups dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons soft butter.

Mix 1 cup of sugar with cinnamon. Spread butter on dough and sprinkle with sugar mixture. Roll up tightly like jelly roll, 1½ inches thick. Cut off ½-inch pieces. Sprinkle rest of sugar in greased shallow pan. Add cinnamon rolls, flat side up, side by side. Let rise until dough, has doubled in bulk. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

Fruit Sponge Pie.

BEGONIAS IN AUGUST.

TO be successful with begonias in the house in the fall and winter much will depend on the care you give them at this time. Many people prefer to keep old plants from year to year, but this is really a poor plan, because after a begonia is one year old it invariably becomes straggling and shapeless. It is very much better to raise young plants each year.

During the hot weather begonias require a light, sandy soil and should be shaded in such a manner that they get all the sun possible, but are not scaled or burned. When the time comes to pot them, put plenty of broken pottery in the bottom of the pots before the soil goes in. You will also find that they bloom better in small-sized pots, where they make strong roots.

After you have potted the plants, do not allow them to stand on the ground. If you do, the roots will become infested with earth worms, which will keep the soil from draining properly so that it will soon become sour. A sour soil is not conducive to strong, vigorous root growth growth.

Many of the begonia varieties are quite soft and break easily, so it is better to tie them to small stakes when they are outdoors where they may become the prey of sudden winds, such as accompany electrical storms. These stakes should be as inconspicuous as possible. Florists sell them for a few cents a dozen. Ask for the ones already dyed green.

I have found that almost all failures with winter-flowering begonias are due to overpotting or to trying to make old plants do what they are past doing. So it is better to grow young plants every year from cuttings. They will root readily in a window in a pot of sand if care is taken that they are never too wet. The matter of not overwatering is most important.

When you make the begonia slip or cutting, never use hard wood, but only the tips of the young shoots. Make them about three inches in length. After rooting, pot them in small pots in sandy soil and see that they have plenty of drainage. It is safer to have too much than too little.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Those Disgusted Readers.

A GREAT editor once receiving a fiery letter of complaint from a reader concerning an article that we had written in his paper, sent us the complaining letter with the suggestion that we paste it in our scrap book "as a testimonial," and remarked that the test of the writing business was the writer's ability or inability to make the reader think. He urged us to keep up the good work. But that is a large order!

Most people do not want to think. When anything touches them to the point of striking a spark of thought, they quite feelingly resent it. They resent any effort directed to the end that they may exercise the strangely convoluted little mass securely hidden in their skulls. That is the answer to the many more or less violent letters we find in our mail. People stirred out of their accustomed stupor, snapping at the prodding stick. They do not like to be disturbed. Strangely the people who yell the loudest, most need the prodding they so bitterly resent. They are invariably of the mental attitude of the small child making faces at his elders and vociferously they demand that their letters be published. One poor little soul storms and stamps her feet and calls names and then says, "Dare you to print this." We could print the letter as we are sole arbiter of what goes into this space. But we have thousands of highly intelligent readers who already know that the world has millions of adults with the minds of children, and they look for something a little more than the outpourings of child minds when they read their daily paper.

We have our friend "Disgusted," who chief objection to us seems to be our "highbrow" attitude. That irks "Disgusted" to the point that she would "hire a page" if she could "tell the whole world what she thinks of such people." Then there is "Married Man," who is always cropping up to spoil our breakfast. "Married Man" is always violent. Although he is not always the same man. But he always sounds the same. His particular peeve is that we persist in glorifying woman. And his contention is that there is no creature on earth so little deserving of glory. He has not yet offered to buy up the paper in order to do justice to his peeve, but he does want us thrown to the lions and "some married man who needs the job to support a family be put in our place!" We do not consider that one a half bad idea! The more we think about it the surer we are that a column turned out by one of these fevered souls would be good! Just sit them down and let them rave. The result we feel sure would be irresistible. If we are ever lost for an idea for a new feature, we will get together all the peeves we have ever received and run as is. Take, for instance, "Stenog," who writes in by the ton. What she knows about those "vile men who are always being sympathized with" in the column. And the ever-present "Bach," whose cry is "give the man a break instead of always favoring your own sex." And "Older and Wiser" who gets neither older nor wiser mentally. And "Be Yourself" [illegible] we urge people to marry for the fun of laughing at their [illegible]. They are a merry little band these folks who hate column conductors, and arrive with the grape fruit every morning. There they sit making faces. Daring us to print what they think of us. Getting more and more excited with every scratch of the pen. Well, all we can say is that it is good for the men to get excited like that. It helps the little convoluted mass. It is a sign that something has made them think. And that, according to that great editor, is what writing is supposed to accomplish. So we can now go on with our grape fruit, coffee and high-mindedness.

But we still believe it would be simply grand to let these people do a column. Just open the gate and let them charge right in and do their worst. Could anything possibly be jollier—or go better with a cup of good coffee? Meanwhile to save space and satisfy all we will briefly state that this column is simply terrible, should not be printed and should not be read. Now, we hope we have partially soothed a few of our disgusted readers.

Rosa Padilla Visits Exiled King in Paris

Former Envoy's Daughter Says Alfonso Still Is Sportsman.

OUT of strife-ridden Spain comes a gay note reminiscent of the former regime, carried in the news from Paris of a visit recently paid there by Senorita Rosa Padilla, daughter of the former Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Padilla.

Senorita Padilla went to Paris some time ago from San Sebastian, where her family is now living, accompanied by her cousin, one of the attractive Satrustegui girls who passed a winter in Washington several years ago. While in the French Capital they were guests of Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of the United States Ambassador, and of Mrs. Robert Pell, jr., wife of the secretary to Ambassador Edge, both of whom Senorita Padilla had known in Washington, and many parties were planned for the two girls who are well acquainted with the American colony in Paris.

Though Senorita Rosa left the troubles of her country behind her, her heart was still with Spain, for during her visit in Paris she and her cousin were received by their former king in his exile home at Fontainebleau. The Padilla family has for many years been very close to King Alfonso and during the summers he and the royal family, which had its summer palace in San Sebastian, recently received the Padillas who were included in the royal party at the races, bull fights and more intimate affairs.

Senorita Padilla writes that she found the king worn and sad, but still his gracious, charming self, smiling when she told him of the familiar activities among the summer colony in the Spanish resort. His good sportsmanship which never failed him in athletic contests is standing him in good stead now, she said, and the French people feel it an honor to have the exiled king choose their country for his temporary home.

Senorita Padilla and her cousin have returned to Spain and are again with their families. The former Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, Count de Montefuerte, who sailed last week from New York, has joined his wife and children at the home of the Countess de Montefuerte's parents in San Sebastian, where they will remain until later in the year. The mother of Countess de Montefuerte was one of the ladies in waiting to the former Queen Victoria, and so among that small group is found a deep and personal feeling of the strife and change of the country.

M. Etienne Lardy, Counselor of the Swiss Legation, will arrive the middle of the week from Switzerland, where he accompanied Mme. Lardy and their children several weeks ago. M. Lardy will act as charge d'affaires of Switzerland during the absence of the minister.

Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, jr., who went to New York several days ago, has gone to Delaware Water Gap for a visit of two weeks. Later she will go to Newport to spend the remainder of the summer with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss.

Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough and his son, Mr. Brice Goldsborough, have gone to Biddefordpool, Me., to spend the remainder of the summer.

They went first to their home near Boyce, Va. Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin was formerly Miss Isabel Tyson, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence D. Tyson and the late Senator Tyson.

Mrs. Reginald Cochet entertained a small party at the dinner dance on the Shoreham Terrace Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason Remey, whose marriage took place a fortnight ago in Paris, are spending their honeymoon motoring through the chateau district of France, making their headquarters at their apartment which is located not far from the American Embassy in the French capital.

Upon their return to this country they will reside at the charming home built recently by Mr. Remey on Massachusetts avenue. With this in view Mr. Remey's bachelor establishment is being considerably enlarged. Mrs. Remey was formerly Mrs. Karl Klemm.

Lieut. and Mrs. Joseph F. Dahlgren, the latter formerly Miss Anne Huntly Gordon, of Baltimore and Washington, have returned from France, where Lieut. Dahlgren has been stationed, and are in Annapolis, where he will be on duty and where they have taken a house. Mr. Douglas Huntly Gordon, the brother of Mrs. Dahlgren, will also take up his residence in the Brice House, Annapolis, in September, having been made president of St. John's College. His mother, Mrs. J. Wilmer Biddle, is spending the summer in Europe.

Miss Elizabeth Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Atwater Kent, and Mr. James Laurens Van Alen, whose marriage will take place August 8 at Bar Harbor, will spend their honeymoon in France.

Mrs. Julius Peyser was hostess to a small group at luncheon Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. Simpson In Jamestown, R. I.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson and their daughters, Frances and Betsy Anne, have arrived at Jamestown, R. I., where they will spend the rest of the summer.

Visiting Atlantic City, where they are guests at the Claridge, are several Washingtonians. Among them are Mr. Theodore Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Craig, Miss Lillian T. Helbling, and Mr. and Mrs. L. P. West.

President Harding, August 5, for Germany. Maj. Wagner has been assigned to duty in Berlin and for the next four years he and Mrs. Wagner will make their home there.

Mrs. J. F. Alvord, jr., was hostess to a party of ten at the dinner dance on the Shoreham Terrace Saturday.

Smart Folk Revive Fame Of Cape May

Washington, Philadelphia Patronage Returns to Resort.

Cape May, once the queen resort of the Jersey Coast, has again come into its own, and many smart people from Washington and Philadelphia now spend enjoyable summers there.

Miss Dorothea Lane, who has been there since the early part of July visiting Miss Emily Cookman, of Philadelphia, will return to Washington next week to join her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lane, in their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Miss Lane spent last week at Narragansett Pier, but returned to Cape May for a party given Saturday night by Mrs. Francis J. Braun, of Philadelphia, at the Admiral. Following the dinner guests attended the supper dance.

Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall and their sons, Mr. John Marshall, jr., and Mr. Paull Marshall, are passing the summer there in a cottage which they have occupied since July 15, and Mr. Marshall and his sons, all three ardent golfers, are taking part in tournaments there and in neighboring places. They will not return to their home on Tracy place until early fall, when Mr. Paull Marshall will return to his studies at Amherst. Mr. John Marshall was graduated in June from Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ellwood Jones, who are now at their summer home at Switchback, W. Va., will go to Cape May in August, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Nancy Jones, who is now visiting her aunt, Mrs. Borntrigger, of Pittsburgh, at her island in the Muskoka Lakes.

Dales Will Go to Home In Vermont

Business at Capitol Has Kept Senator in City This Summer.

Senator and Mrs. Porter H. Dale, among the few members of the senatorial group still lingering in town, will go early in August to their home in Vermont.

Business "up on the Hill" has kept Senator Dale in Washington, and Mrs. Dale, freed from the many duties which pressed upon her last winter as president of the Congressional Club, has enjoyed loafing and "being domestic."

Elections at the Congressional Club were held in the spring, and when the club reopens with the convening of the new Congress Mrs. Leonilas C. Dyer will assume the guidance of its many activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibbon L. White, who made their home at the Oakland, have moved to their former home on Rosemary street in Chevy Chase. Mrs. White's aunt, Mrs. Raye Garrett Fenwick, is leaving August 1 for her home in Hollywood, Calif., after spending several months here visiting friends and relatives. Mrs. Fenwick has also spent some time with her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. J. L. Welch, at Annapolis.

IT is not necessary for The American Oil Company to make wild claims for a regular gasoline. The American Oil Company makes a regular gas of superb quality--ORANGE AMERICAN GAS. It is refined from the finest obtainable oils--under the most modern and efficient refining methods. It sells everywhere at regular gas price--but its day by day performance is a continuous demonstration of how good a regular gas can be.

But The American Oil Company does not say that ORANGE AMERICAN GAS will equal the performance and economy of a true special motor fuel such as AMOCO-GAS.

AMOCO-GAS, the original special motor fuel, possesses qualities which can never be duplicated in regular or straight gasoline. It is sold at a slightly higher price than regular gas--but the additional cost at the pump is returned to you many times over--by greater mileage, by lessened repair bills and by the increased trade-in value of your car.

So we can afford to be open-minded. We produce two excellent gases at two distinct prices. And whichever you choose--you are assured of completely satisfactory performance. Get one of them today--at most good service stations.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

NEW television corporations are being organized daily in Delaware and other States, in a frantic rush to get in on the present bonanza of television stock selling. Regiments of stock salesmen are being hired to call on sucker lists and sell securities under the pretense of letting the investor share in legendary profits of "this new billion-dollar industry," O. H. Caldwell, former Federal Radio Commissioner warns.

Even reputable Wall street firms are making open inquiries among radio men, seeking television companies to promote. Meanwhile the Department of Justice, the New York district attorney's office and the Post-office Department are watching some of the high-pressure stock-selling methods now underway, with a purpose of action. Already the use of the mails by several television "tipster sheets" has been stopped.

"Before any layman takes hard-earned dollars and invests them in television securities, he should inform himself to some extent about the status of the television art and the likelihood of improvement, and should also insist on witnessing a television demonstration to observe the crudities of present television for himself," Mr. Caldwell declared.

"The basic principle of all present television machines was invented back in 1887 by a Russian named Nipkow, and except to apply recent details, the basic principle remains the same. This point-by-point method involves the sending of enormously high frequencies over radio or wire circuits, and even with half-million cycles per second, the picture will be something like that of a poor newspaper halftone, and far less satisfying than a home movie.

"Present systems are all surprisingly identical in method and results produced, and all seem limited to the showing of coarse outlines of a single face, or at best two faces. One's 'interest' in watching such television images of limited detail quickly subsides after a minute or so, and those who have witnessed demonstrations of all the principal systems do not feel that the flickering television image is yet more than a scientific curiosity, and is still far from being a medium of entertainment or amusement.

"Television has been up against a stone wall of limitations as far as future developments of present methods is concerned. And despite the herculean efforts expended upon it, little advance has been made in five years. Television of motion-picture quality still awaits a new inventor with a brand-new idea for transmitting images, replacing the present complex point-by-point method," Mr. Caldwell concludes.

JACK SMART, long the "Mr." of Columbia's "Mr. and Mrs." program, now has a "Mrs." in real life. The bride is Alice Coy, actress last seen on Broadway in "Up and U."

"Murder on Forty-seventh street," will be dramatized during the Crime Club period tonight (WMAL, 8 o'clock).

A Wagnerian opera, "Tristan and Isolde," conducted by Furtwaengler, will be broadcast direct from Beyreuth in Germany early in August. The Wireless Military Band will be heard from London this afternoon at 3:35 o'clock over WRC.

Not to be outdone by Columbia the N. B. C. also announces a broadcast overseas from Salzburg, Austria. The latter will attempt to pick up a portion of Cimarosa's opera, "Il Matrimonio Segreto," next Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

A NEW series begins this morning at 8:15 o'clock over the WEAF net with the introduction of Tom Waring's dance orchestra. Tom is a brother of Fred and traveled with Waring's Pennsylvanians ten years before striking out for himself.

Mid-summer Pan American concert will be broadcast tonight from the Hall of the Americas (NAA, 9 o'clock, WRC 10 o'clock).

A NEW program, "Paris Night Life" will be heard at 6:45 o'clock tonight over the WJZ network, featuring Princess Ivanova Obelensky, of the former Russian Imperial Court "as patroness." Though exactly what the duties of a patroness are on the air, we can not say.

Ben Bernie brings to his fellow artists about the studios the tale of a rustic visitor to New York.

The visitor made a desperate run for the ferryboat as it was leaving the slip. He made a mighty leap, and covered the intervening space, then fell sprawling to the deck, where for two minutes he lay stunned. At last he sat up feebly, and stared dazedly over the quarter-mile expanse of water between boat and shore.

"Holy hop-toads!" he exclaimed in a tone of profound awe, "What a jump!"

Jack Enterprets the MODE

New York, July 26.

NOW naturally, being a Fashion Cricket, 'n' going around to all the fashionable places in all the fashionable seasons, I'm somewhat more observing than other women. I have to be all eyes and ears to gather the fashion information that I write for my deah public—and I've never found Fashion Cricketing a more fascinating pursuit than this year.

Not only are the frocks lovely, the hats piquantly charming, the gatherings socially important and distinctly entertaining, but the women themselves more beautiful and—we-l-l-l-l-l, youthful! Even those with white hair, my deahs! For a time, the reason defied analysis, but I finally placed the credit where it should be—on the women's complexions.

There just don't seem to be any glaringly painted or harshly powdered complexions these days—and while these effects may have been striking, they were hard and old. How old, you'll never realize until you see a gathering of the fresh-faced, young, natural looking fashionable women today. There's a vast difference my deahs, between a natural 1931 complexion and the natural complexion of grandmother's day. O-h-h-h-h but her skin used to burn and chap and peel and redden at the most inopportune times—and if she ever was so brazen as to apply a hint of talcum to her dainty, or rough-textured nose the night the best beau called, it either stood out like pebbles or slipped and slid and blew away long before he hitched his horse to the fence across the way. And oh my, the condition of that poor face after the ten-mile crosscountry marathon in the teeth of the night breeze!

But today? Thanks to the modern methods of skin care and make-up, we see complexions baby fresh, velvety, smooth—and we note with pride the doing away of the graceless powder puff and the shiny-nose-in-spite-of-every-thing!

* * * *

We just know we must be lovely in our Sunday night frocks—and most of us hope sincerely that we won't fly to pieces while we're being lovely for that occasion! Honestly, now, I'm not fooling, that has been a great fault with past Sunday night styles. But now that the first thrill of lovely Sunday night things has passed, we're combining practical charm with beauty. See what I mean? Isn't this frock I sketched for you today adorable, made as it is of white chiffon, with cobwebby white lace? Its little ruffles are charmingly decorative, as is the attached bolero effect, but it is perfectly practical in its absence of fluttery gadgets that charm the eye but do get most woefully in the way if you want to do anything—as who doesn't, these amusing, busy days?

* * * *

Leave the drippy, floaty things to those who can sit around and be perfect pictures of useless fluff! I warn you, as one who knows that you'll be left to look like a picture while every one else has the fun, if you will dress uselessly!

And speaking of usefulness in a lovely guise—don't you see the possibilities in a smart lace bonnet like this, which, when it's tired of being just plain lace, adds a perky little black satin brim?

* * * *

Yokes, buttons, gold mesh, monograms, seed pearls, openwork, fagoting—o-o-o-h, why go on? I'll bet you never imagined all the different kinds of hand work there are in the world. And the lovely thing about it is that these hand touches make your clothes so individual and attractive nowadays. And fun? Just send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet, and find out for yourself!

* * * *

And then there's the weekly Dare fashion letter. Look for it in The Sunday Washington Post.

Au revoir!

Culbertson on Contract

by Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

THE FORCING SYSTEM DEFINED.

THERE are three characteristic features that sharply distinguish the Approach Forcing System in Contract from other systems. They are:

First. The use as first choice of the Approach suit bids in decided preference to no-trumps.

Second. The use of the Forcing two bid for the Opening bidder and of Forcing Takeouts for either partner.

Third. The use of the Direct method in preference to Ace-showing for Slam bidding.

The Approach Method. When a hand offers a choice between an Opening trump bid and a notrump, the suit (be it even a four-card minor) and not the notrump, should as a rule be bid first. This principle applies with hands containing singletons, as well as with those containing unprotected two or three-card suits. This apparently simple principle is of even greater importance in Contract than in Auction and carries with it as a consequence some radical changes in the bidding methods of both partners. For instance, four-card suits headed as low as by an A J 10, A Q or K Q 9 or five-card suits headed by a K or Q J, are bid freely and thus increase tremendously the game-making or game-saving range of hands. The requirement for adequate trump support is in turn made higher than usual. Three small trumps or a Queen small is not considered "adequate support." Partner should try to deny such support with some other trump or Takeout with notrumps, unless the first suit is rebid.

Another important consequence of the Approach Principle is that the Responding Hand takes out with weaker hands than in other systems.

In the vital question of choice between two biddable suits, the most decided preference is given in the Forcing System to the longer suit.

Forcing Bids. The principle of Forcing bids, which gave the name to the system in Contract, is nothing but a logical extension of the Approach Principle and other methods already developed for Auction. In Contract where a game or Slam must be contracted for in order to score it, there are two situations which require that the bidding be kept unconditionally open by partner.

First Situation. Opening trump bids of two are Forcing. Such a two bid is a gigantic Approach bid and shows about five honor tricks distributed in three suits. Partner's responses are: (1) must not pass, (2) can not raise the bid suit unless holding at least three trumps to an honor and one honor trick, (3) failing trump support can bid some other five-card suit, if headed by at least a Q J and one honor trick in the hand, (4) holding a blank should bid two notrumps (minimum response), (5) holding one and a half honor tricks should bid three notrumps. Should partner himself hold a good hand, he need not jump the bid, since after the very powerful hand shown by the Opening bidder, the bidding must be kept open until a game contract is reached.

Second Situation. Any Jump Takeout in a suit by partner of the Opening bidder is a Forcing bid, provided such a "jump" is below a game contract. Forcing Takeouts show about three honor tricks (in addition to partner's two and a half). Hence, after partner's Forcing Takeout the Opening bidder can not pass. If unable to support the partner's suit or rebid his own, his minimum response is the required number of notrumps. The extraordinary feature of all Forcing bids is that the bid suit may be of minimum strength, even a good four-card suit, which absolutely prohibits partner from raising on less than three fairly good trumps. The underlying idea of a Forcing Takeout is to find out without risk of partner passing whether he can support a suit, failing which there always remains the notrump (Approach Principle).

Example of the Forcing Takeout:

Opening Hand	Responding Hand
♠ 7 5	♠ A J 4 3 2
♥ K 10 9	♥ Q J 8
♦ A K J 9 4	♦ Q 6
♣ 9 8 7	♣ A Q 6

Bidding: West, "one diamond." East, "two spades!" A Forcing bid. West, "two notrumps."

A minimum response. East, "three notrumps."

Certain writers use a jump suit Overcall of an opponent's bid as a Force. I can not agree with this, as I believe it too risky to force a response from partner in face of the considerable strength shown by the opponent.

Slam Bidding: The direct method of Slam bidding instead of the unjustly popular "cue bidding" way, is the third important characteristic of the Forcing Principle. Instead of using a confusing convention to show Aces and often with an indefinite amount of tricks, we prefer to show a definite number of tricks in the belief that Aces will be, as a rule, automatically inferred from the bidding.

Today's Pointer.

A Small Slam should be bid on a hand which offers a slightly better than even chance of making the twelfth trick. When vulnerable somewhat greater risk can be taken, because the reward is greater.

Grand Slams should be bid rarely and only when the hand offers at least a three to one expectancy of fulfillment.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Those Disgusted Readers.

A GREAT editor once receiving a fiery letter of complaint from a reader concerning an article that we had written in his paper, sent us the complaining letter with the suggestion that we paste it in our scrap book "as a testimonial," and remarked that the test of the writing business was the writer's ability or inability to make the reader think. He urged us to keep up the good work. But that is a large order!

Most people do not want to think. When anything touches them to the point of striking a spark of thought, they quite feelingly resent it. They resent any effort directed to the end that they may exercise the strangely convoluted little mass securely hidden in their skulls. That is the answer to the many more or less violent letters we find in our mail. People stirred out of their accustomed stupor, snapping at the prodding stick. They do not like to be disturbed. Strangely the people who yell the loudest, most need the prodding they so bitterly resent. They are invariably of the mental attitude of the small child making faces at his elders and vociferously they demand that their letters be published. One poor little soul storms and stamps her feet and calls names and then says, "Dare you to print this." We could print the letter as we are sole arbiter of what goes into this space. But we have thousands of highly intelligent readers who already know that the world has millions of adults with the minds of children, and they look for something a little more than the outpourings of child minds when they read their daily paper.

We have our friend "Disgusted," who chief objection to us seems to be our "highbrow" attitude That irks "Disgusted" to the point that she would "hire a page" if she could "tell the whole world what she thinks of such people." Then there is "Married Man," who is always cropping up to spoil our breakfast. "Married Man" is always violent. Although he is not always the same man. But he always sounds the same. His particular peeve is that we persist in glorifying woman. And his contention is that there is no creature on earth so little deserving of glory. He has not yet offered to buy up the paper in order to do justice to his peeve, but he does want us thrown to the lions and "some married man who needs the job to support a family be put in our place!" We do not consider that one a half bad idea! The more we think about it the surer we are that a column turned out by one of these fevered souls would be good! Just sit them down and let them rave. The result we feel sure would be irresistible. If we are ever lost for an idea for a new feature, we will get together all the peeves we have ever received and run as is. Take, for instance, "Stenog," who writes in by the ton. What she knows about those "vile men who are always being sympathized with" in the column. And the ever-present "Bach," whose cry is "give the man a break instead of always favoring your own sex." And "Older and Wiser" who gets neither older nor wiser mentally. And "Be Yourself" who insists we urge people to marry for the fun of laughing at their [illegible]. They are a merry little band these folks who hate column conductors, and arrive with the grape fruit every morning. There they sit making faces. Daring us to print what they think of us Getting more and more excited with every scratch of the pen. Well, all we can say is that it is good for the men to get excited like that. It helps the little convoluted mass. It is a sign that something has made them think. And that, according to that great editor, is what writing is supposed to accomplish. So we can now go on with our grape fruit, coffee and high-mindedness.

But we still believe it would be simply grand to let these people do a column. Just open the gate and let them charge right in and do their worst. Could anything possibly be jollier—or go better with a cup of good coffee? Meanwhile to save space and satisfy all we will briefly state that this column is simply terrible, should not be printed and should not be read. Now, we hope we have partially soothed a few of our disgusted readers.

Woman Tells Efforts For Nationality Code

The Consultative Committee of Women was unanimous in recommending a uniform nationality code for women to the League of Nations at the close of its meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, recently, Miss Muna Lee, secretary of the National Woman's party, declared yesterday at the monthly tea, given at party headquarters. The committee also opposed the recommendations made by the Hague conference on the subject and recommended a new convention, she said.

Mrs. Harry E. Hull, wife of the Commissioner on Immigration, told of her educational work among Korean women, and their reaction to Western customs and innovations.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

BEGONIAS IN AUGUST.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed stamped envelope is supplied.

TO be successful with begonias in the house in the fall and winter much will depend on the care you give them at this time. Many people prefer to keep old plants from year to year, but this is really a poor plan, because after a begonia is one year old it invariably becomes straggling and shapeless. It is very much better to raise young plants each year.

During the hot weather begonias require a light, sandy soil and should be shaded in such a manner that they get all the sun possible, but are not scaled or burned. When the time comes to pot them, put plenty of broken pottery in the bottom of the pots before the soil goes in. You will also find that they bloom better in small-sized pots, where they make strong roots.

After you have potted the plants, do not allow them to stand on the ground. If you do, the roots will become infested with earth worms, which will keep the soil from draining properly so that it will soon become sour. A sour soil is not conducive to strong, vigorous root growth.

Many of the begonia varieties are quite soft and break easily, so it is better to tie them to small stakes when they are outdoors where they may become the prey of sudden winds, such as accompany electrical storms. These stakes should be as inconspicuous as possible. Florists sell them for a few cents a dozen. Ask for the ones already dyed green.

I have found that almost all failures with winter-flowering begonias are due to overpotting or to trying to make old plants do what they are past doing. So it is better to grow young plants every year from cuttings. They will root readily in a window in a pot of sand if care is taken that they are never too wet. The matter of not overwatering is most important.

When you make the begonia slip or cutting, never use hard wood, but only the tips of the young shoots Make them about three inches in length. After rooting, pot them in small pots in sandy soil and see that they have plenty of drainage. It is safer to have too much than too little.

INDIAN TACITURNITY BALKS DEATH PROBE

Seven Held in Girl's Slaying With Lone White Man Keep Silence.

White River Apache Reservation, Ariz., July 26 (A.P.).—Officers investigating the strange puzzle of the death of Henrietta Schmerler, 23-year-old Columbia University anthropology student, stood nonplussed today before the taciturnity of seven Indians under arrest in the case.

Accepting their imprisonment stoically, the Indians are steadfastly silent, refusing also to comment on the detention of W. R. Warner, a white man. Warner was arrested when his name was found in a letter written by Miss Schmerler and when an Indian deaf mute declared in the sign language that he saw Warner placing the girl, dead or unconscious, in his automobile near Fort Apache.

Warner, held in the reservation guard house, denied that he saw the girl July 18, the day on which she disappeared.

Signs Indicate Struggle.

Officers are unable to reconcile the deaf mute's story with evidences of a struggle in the ravine where the body, bearing numerous stab wounds, was found.

The investigators said there was every reason to believe that the girl was neither dead nor unconscious when she arrived there, but that she was slain on the spot after she had been attacked.

Discovery of her purse and a flashlight several yards from where the body lay also bolstered the theory that she was waylaid as she walked alone through the ravine on one of her many solitary expeditions. She came to Arizona to study the lore of the Apaches and in dress, language and customs of living, become as nearly like them as possible.

Deaf Mute Not Suspect.

The deaf mute is not himself suspected of the crime.

So far authorities have been unable to ascertain the movements of any of the Indians under arrest at the time Miss Schmerler was slain. The names of the suspects have not been revealed, but it was said they were held more because of previous records of misconduct than by reason of any definite proof against them.

The letter written by Miss Schmerler, found in her cabin, was addressed to relatives at New York. It said she feared for her life because of the actions of one man.

Miss Schmerler lived a month in a cabin at East Fork, using a research grant of the anthropology department of Columbia University.

Grasshopper Pest Invades Nebraska

Buffalo, Nebr., July 26 (U.P.).—This town was on the grasshopper battle-front tonight, with farmers inflicting heavy losses on the advancing army that had penetrated deeply into the Buffalo sector.

Wooden fence posts, wagon tongues, even clothing hung out to dry, was quickly devoured by the gray-yellow horde. Anything containing vegetable fiber attracts the hungry grasshopper.

Although farmers said several millions of the grasshoppers had been killed, additional swarms are expected when eggs now strewing the ground have incubated. Fires, in which bodies of the slain insects were being burned, dotted the plains tonight. Introduction of poison as a weapon resulted in the death of thousands of the insects.

The insect invasion has devastated gardens, crops and fruit trees. Damage already is in the millions of dollars.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IN order that you may be kept fully apprised of the progress being made with what seems from the present outlook to be the opening attraction of the new season at the National Theater, September 14, I beg leave to relay the latest bulletin from the office of Leonard Bergman, producer of Myron C. Fagan's new play, "Peter Flies High."

Already having announced Glenn Hunter as the actor engaged for the principal male role in Mr. Fagan's new opus to be premiered here, Mr. Bergman now advises that Mary Loane has been engaged for the feminine lead, opposite Mr. Hunter. Miss Loane last appeared in New York in support of Ethel Barrymore in "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel," prior to which she had been seen in "Cradle Snatchers," "The French Kiss" and other plays.

There would seem to be no foundation in fact for the suspicion that Washington's theater orchestras are not keeping up to date in their popular overture material.

This week at the Fox, for instance, "Poor Little Doorstep Baby," culled from the score of Heywood Broun's cooperative revue, "Shoot the Works," which opened in New York only last Tuesday, is being played almost before the ink is dry. It is only one of a group of hits from current Broadway productions comprising the orchestral interlude being conducted by Al Mitchell. The others are: "Doing the New York," from the "Follies;" "When Yuba Plays the Rhuba on the Tuba," from the "Third Little Show;" "Dancing in the Dark," from "Band Wagon;" "In the Merry Month of Maybe," from "Crazy Quilt," and "High and Low," als ofrom "Band Wagon."

You certainly can't ask the boys to play them before they are written!

Since "Who's in it?" is the question popped at me from all sides every time a review mentions a "Screen Snapshots," you might as well know, all two of you, that the issue currently on view at RKO-Keith's discloses increasing shots of no less a group of screen celebrities than Charlie Murray, Eddie Lambert, Ed Borden, Al Herman, Leo Carillo, Charlie Mosconi, Robby Jones, Winnie Lightneyr, George Marshall, William Wellman, Walter Huston, Chic Sale, Ralph Ince, Dorothy Burgess, Marian Marsh, William Powell, "Slim" Summerville, James Cagney, Joan Blondell, Tom Patricola, Frances Starr, Sallyy Blane, John Boles, Sue Carroll, Nick Stuart and Ben Lyon. In addition, of course, to those I've forgotten.

No, it does not advertise any famous brand of cigarettes!

Speaking of RKO-Keith's, the nearest Constance Bennett has ever come to playying contemporaneously with her father, Richard Bennett, on the local screens, was last Friday when "The Common Law" was opening on Fifteenth street and "Five and Ten" closing at Loew's Columbia. That record, however, is soon to be broken and, for the first time in their careers, Connie and her daddy will be seen in the same film, "Bought," a Warner Brothers production soon to have its premiere on Broadway.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that Constance Bennett's career has been devoted wholly to the cinema, while—at least in so far as the talking picture era is concerned—her distinguished father's has been almost exclusively identified with the stage. Thus, when "Bought" was being filmed under the direction of Archie Mayo, their positions were exactly reversed from the old days when Bennett, pere, was accustomed, in the role of paterfamilias, to lecture his three talented daughters, Constance, Barbara and Joan, on the approved practices of the stage. In the new medium—so like the old, yet so different—Constance was the veteran and Papa Richard the tyro, accepting and appreciating suggestions from his daughter.

Quite a change from the cl.. "Papa'll spank" days!

And Primo Carnera could have knocked me down with a crowbar yesterday when the first post brought a letter from Mr. Maynard Owen Williams, postmarked Nedou's Hotel, Sprinagar, under date of June 24. Mr. Williams, it seems, is a member of the Haardt Trans-Asiatic Mission en route to Pieping, which has "had a great trip so far and now the Pamirs lie ahead. Forty-five days' hike to Kashgar where we join the group of fine big cars which are plowing westward through the desert to meet us."

But that wasn't the big kick of the letter. The big kick was that Mr. Williams, who dates back to Kalamazoo, Mich., took all that trouble to write me some nice things about a column that appeared in The Post of last May 18, concerning a bleak, early morning enterprise many years ago when a couple of us helped the Barnum & Bailey Circus unload down on the Michigan Central siding at 2 o'clock in the morning. It sort of made Mr. Williams homesick, or something

"My public" may be scarce, but it sure is scattered!

Came a card, too, from Tom Olsen, formerly in charge of advertising and publicity at the Fox Theater in this city, who is vacationing up at Qualicum Beach in British Columbia, which he describes with great restraint, as "God's own personally selected country." And Mr. Olsen, I believe, is of Norwegian, and not British descent, at that.

The reason you will like Anatole Friedland's "Twentieth Century Revue," at the Earl—and I believe I said yesterday that you would—is that everybody in it works like a Trojan. Maybe a couple of Trojans, what with unemployment and all. I have never seen an actor plough into a job more enthusiastically than Irving Edwards does into his, and when Bobbie Bernard sings "I'll Come Marching Home to You," he cleans up the St. Mihiel salient all over again. And the girls, Loretta Dennison, Una Cooper and the rest, are right up there with them. Nice work, we say.

I have been wondernig ever since whether that catbird that almost pecked at my fingers out in the back yard yesterday afternoon thought I had stolen one of her kittens or merely wished be to toss her a piece of liver.

Probably the latter, because times are so bad out in our back yard that the robins are even glad of a chance to tug at a rubber band!

DISEASE THREATENS AGED SAVED IN FIRE

Physicians Fight Pneumonia From Pittsburgh Blaze; Flame Deaths 39.

Pittsburgh, July 26 (A.P.).—A fight began today to prevent pneumonia from taking the lives of many of those rescued from fire that destroyed the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor here Friday night and early Saturday.

The number of lives lost in the blaze meanwhile mounted to 39 over the week-end, with the deaths of Mrs. Mary Filey, 76; Mrs. Theresa Risinger, 81; Bridget Shea, 72; Mrs. Mary Connor, 66; Mary Shumaker, 68, and Clara Lentz, 70.

Fear that shock and exposure would exact their price was expressed even as the 250 victims were being borne into hospitals while the fire still raged. Today, that toll believed taken, doctors and nurses toiled over more than 150 old and infirm men and women remaining to help them rebuild their waning strength to offset the ravages of disease.

Police, too, were busy. No trace had been found of eleven persons in the institution at the time of the fire. No bodies were found in the ruins, and the only supposition was that the eleven were being cared for in private homes, but where and what care was being given was unknown.

The number of unidentified dead dropped to 12, meanwhile, with the identification of Mrs. Mary E. Hite, 67.

What caused the fatal blaze still was not definitely determined. Fire department officials believed, however, that spontaneous combustion in a mop, that had been used in waxing and polishing floors, seemed the most likely explanation. Fire broke out in the charred ruins again this afternoon, but it was quickly detected and extinguished.

Cochet Beats Perry After Austin Evens Series by Winning Borotra Match

load on his shoulders. He never hesitated to run into the dangerous Cochet, often forcing the French star to err. The Briton had an attack of "temperament." He made a guitar out of his racquet and often turned to admonish some one in the audience for "breathing."

Losing the first set, Perry came back to snatch the second at 6—1, ripping through the champion like a tornado through a town of wooden houses.

The match was halted for half an hour in the sixth game of the second set after Cochet had dropped one game chiefly because he slid and slipped while serving.

Cochet Comes Through In Pinches.

In the third set, Perry passed Cochet at the net frequently. Cochet, as on Friday, plainly was disgusted with his play, but he found his touch each time his back was against the wall.

Cochet gained a 5-to-3 lead in the fourth set, but Perry rallied for a 30-to-15 advantage in the ninth game. Cochet worked it to 30-all and, after a long volley, reached 40-to-30 as another downpour began. Cochet's winning point for game, set, match and series came when Perry overhit the ball.

As the match ended, flying red cushions filled the air. From somewhere came the tunes of "La Marseillaise" and "God Save the King." Two huskies loaded Cochet onto their shoulders and haled him off the court.

The Davis Cup was France's for another year.

PARKS TITLE RETAINED BY MITCHELL

Bud Markey Beaten, 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, in Final Play.

EXHIBITING the best form he has shown this year, Dooly Mitchell yesterday won the Washington Public Parks singles championship by defeating Bud Markey, 6—2, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3, on the Rock Creek courts before a crowd of approximately 800 tennis enthusiasts. Both players were in rare form, driving powerful forehand and backhand placements with uncanny accuracy. The service of the pair was also good and each aced his opponent on frequent occasions.

Mitchell broke Markey's service twice in the first set to run the score to 5—1 in games. Bud won his service in the seventh game and Mitchell duplicated this feat in the eighth to win the first set. In the second set, Mitchell piled up five games before Markey broke through on his opponent's service to capture his first game of the set. Markey came back with another victory on his own serve to make the score 5—2, but once again Dooly won out in the eighth game.

Horton Smith Winner at St. Paul

278 Is 10 Under Par; Best Score With Balloon Ball.

Cooper Trails by 3 Strokes; Dudley Slips Back.

BY PAUL MICKELSON.

KELLER CLUB, St. Paul, Minn., July 26 (A.P.).—Horton Smith finally overtook his notorious jinx today by capturing the $10,000 St. Paul open golf championship with a rousing 72-hole total of 278 shots, ten strokes under par for the championship Keller Club layout.

Starved for a golfing conquest since he blazed a triumphant trail through the big winter tournaments of 1929-30, the erstwhile "Joplin Ghost," now registered out of Detroit, came back with mighty rounds of 69—69—67—73 to breeze home with the title and $2,500 prize money by a three-stroke margin over the defending champion, "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, of Chicago.

Finest Score Made With Balloon Ball.

It was the finest score since the advent of the new balloon ball. It clipped two strokes off the record established by Cooper a year ago, and it proved Smith was back once more on the game that made him famous.

Trailing Smith by six shots in a deadlock for third place were George Von Elm, golf's big business man, and Walter Hagen, another golfer of first dimensions, who is making a stirring comeback. Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., who topped the par-breaking field at 36 holes by two shots over Smith and Von Elm, couldn't keep up his pace and fell into fifth place with a 285 total.

A brilliant 67 on his morning round today all but salted away the big bag of gold and the championship for Smith. Despite his pair of 69's on the first two eighteen-hole rounds, he found himself two shots behind the high-flying Dudley last night.

But while Dudley and most of the other leaders slumped slightly during the morning round, he stormed over the course with a record-smashing 31 out and an easy 36 on the backward stretch to post a 54 hole total of 205 strokes, which sent him sailing into first place by six shots over Dudley and Cooper.

Misses Disaster on First By Six Inches.

With a ten-stroke insurance policy, he started his afternoon round only to come within 6 inches of disaster on the first tee. He smashed a daring shot from the tee and the ball hooked to the out-of-bounds fence. He then played a provisional ball and the gallery groaned as they watched it sail clear over the fence. After hitting another provisional ball, certain that he had tossed away four precious strokes, a shout arose from the gallery. His first tee shot was found 6 short inches from the fence and he was saved.

From that point on he played safe and sane golf, pushing the pellets out in the fairway with a left-handed mashie and taking no more chances. Despite his care, he bagged a 34, two under par, on his final outward stretch, but strolled in with a 39, three over perfect figures, on the way back to the clubhouse.

PRIZE-WINNERS.

Horton Smith, Detroit, 69, 69, 67, 73—278; $2,500.

Harry Cooper, Chicago, 71, 70, 70, 70—281; $1,000.

George Von Elm, Los Angeles, 69, 69, 74, 72—284; $1,250.

Walter Hagen, Detroit, 72, 72, 70, 70—284; $1,250.

Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., 71, 65, 75, 74—285; $800.

Joe Belfore, Duluth, Minn., 71, 71, 71, 74—287; $556.

YANKS SPLIT PAIR WITH CHISOX

Lose First, 5-4, But Run Wild in Taking Second, 22-5.

NEW YORK, July 26 (A.P.).—The Yankees broke even with the Chicago White Sox in a doubleheader today, winning the second game by the overwhelming score of 22 to 5 after Chicago had taken the first, 5 to 4, in a ninth-inning rally.

The Sox made only five hits off Henry Johnson in the first game, but the Pale Hose made each one count, to gain their first victory over the Yankees this season. One of the blows was a homer by Lu Blue.

In the second game, the Yanks took advantage of the wildness of the Chicago pitchers to run up their big score in four innings on only seventeen hits. Charley Ruffing held the Sox to eight hits and made four on his own behalf. The Yanks scored nine runs off Pat Caraway in the first two innings, then drove him to cover with nine more in the third.

Macks' Win Streak Is Snapped at 13; Hoyt Pounded.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 26 (A.P.).—The thirteen-game winning streak of the champion Philadelphia Athletics was ended today as the Cleveland Indians blasted out a 13-to-2 victory. It also marked the first defeat of Waite Hoyt since he joined the A's. He had won four straight.

Averill's twentieth home run of the season, one more than his total for last year, featured a 19-hit attack upon Hoyt and Rommel, which also included seven doubles and a triple. Burnett included a double in his five hits out of six attempts, while Averill added a double and triple to his homer.

Elliott's Wild Pitch Gives Cubs 2-1 Victory

Chicago, July 26 (A.P.).—Jim Elliott, who had just replaced Clise Dudley on the mound for Philadelphia, let loose a wild pitch in the ninth inning this afternoon that permitted Teachout to score the winning run for the Cubs. The score was 2 to 1, with Malone getting the best of Dudley in a pitching battle.

Charlie Grimm was the Cub hero. He opened the ninth inning with a triple to deep center, the only extra base hit the Bruins got. Teachout ran for Grimm. Hartnett was purposely passed, but when Elliott came in to pitch to Malone, he threw away the game.

The Cubs scored first in the third inning, when Hartnett, Malone and Blair put together singles. Until the eighth, the Phils could do nothing with Malone, but with one out in that inning, Bartell doubled, took third on Klein's out, and scored when Ariett doubled.

Roesch Quits District Golf For Year

Champion Not to Defend Title; Devotes Time to Business.

Nash Wins in Beaver Dam Play; Other Golf News.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

WHEN the District annual golf championship is held on the 10th and 11th of next September, a new champion will be crowned. Frank K. Roesch, who won the title last year, has resigned from the Washington Golf and Country Club, having decided to abandon golf for a year and devote himself to business. He will not, therefore, join any other club and will thus be ineligible to play in the District major event.

In addition to being the present District champion, Roesch has been the leading golfer of his home club for many years. He won the club championship in 1926, 1927 and 1928 and again last year and was runner-up in 1929. He has also figured prominently in club invitation tournaments.

Won 1930 D. C. Title By Stroke.

Roesch won the District championship last year on the Burning Tree course, 72 holes medal play, with a score of 300, defeating John C. Shorey by one stroke when the latter played his second shot into a trap on the seventy-second hole.

Shorey, runner-up last year, will be eligible to play in the championship this year if he holds his membership in the Bannockburn Club, and that organization is still in existence next September, and if the Kenwood Club is admitted to the District Golf Association. The course upon which the championship event will be played has not yet been definitely settled.

Competition for the cup offered by the golf committee was the principal feature of yesterday's program at the Beaver Dam club. The trophy was won by Robert Nash with a card of 89—22—67. There was a triple tie for second between A. B. Robertson, 95—24—71; J. F. Vance, 95—24—71, and D. R. Gill, 89—18—71. Other scores were: R. W. Lewis, 88—16—72, and W. D. Hardett, 101—28—73.

Members of the Bannockburn Club were encouraged yesterday when more than 100 non-members paid green fees of $1 each for playing upon the course.

Match play against par on the course of the Manor Club yesterday attracted a large field. The winner was W. W. Talcott, even with par. A. T. Patton and George F. Ashton, each 2 down to par, tied for second prize.

International Chess Tourney to U. S. Team

Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 26 (A. P.).—The team representing the United States won the world's chess championship today in the team tournament of the International Chess Federation, by playing a 2-2 tie match with Poland, last year's victor, in the nineteenth and final round.

The United States team finished with a total score of 48 games won and 24 lost. Of the eighteen matches contested by the Americans, twelve were won, three tied and three lost.

Although he had not lost a game until today, Isaac Kashdan, champion of the Manhattan Chess Club, succumbed to Akiba Rubinstein, Poland's famous master. This was offset by the victory of Israel Horowitz over Przepiorka.

Frank J. Marshall, the United States champion, drew with Dr. Tartakower, as did Herman Steiner with Makaraczyk.

Poland was second with 47 points and Czechoslovakia third with 46½. Other leading scores were: Jugoslavia, 46; Germany, Latvia and Sweden, 45½ each; Austria, 45; England, 44, and Hungary, 39½.

Manush Chases Slump to Hit Triple and Two Singles.

St. Louis Clinches Victory in 5th; Hadley, Burke in Form.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

AGAIN proving that "a hair on the head is worth two on the brush," the St. Louis Browns packed all of their six hits in two innings yesterday to easily defeat the Nationals, credited with seven safeties, 5 to 2. The Mackmen lost, too, but with the Washington Club trailing the leaders by eleven games, unless the world's champs lose a flock more and the natives suddenly take a new lease on life, it would be better for the Nats to stop looking up and confine their efforts to keeping ahead of the onrushing third-place Yankees, who are now right on their heels.

The veteran, Sam Gray, pulled somewhat of an "iron man" stunt yesterday in coming back to the St. Louis hill after only two days' rest and he was almost as effective as he was after finally getting his bearings in the opener of the series. He kept the hits he allowed fairly well scattered and never was in serious trouble.

Nat Pitchers Used in Wrong Order.

Skipper Walter Johnson called on three pitchers, but, not being a "soothsayer," used them in the wrong order. Lloyd Brown started and ran in a peck of trouble in the fourth and fifth, finally being pounded off of the peak in this latter session. Then Irving Hadley pitched three and a third hitless frames and Bob Burke retired the enemy in order in the ninth.

One reason why Brown failed was the big war club carried by Goose Goslin, former Nat. After Fred Schulte opened the fourth with a single, the first allen hit of the game, Goslin came through with his fourteenth home-run of the season, a drive over the right field wall. In the next frame, the blow that knocked Brown off the hill was a two-bagger by the Goose.

Heine Manush gave Johnson and his mates the only encouragement drawn from the fracas when he came through with three hits, including a triple, to give indications that he is about out of the hitting slump which has had him "down" for, lo, these many moons.

Following the Browns' two-run splurge in the fourth, the Nationals retaliated with a one-run attack. It came as a result of Sam Rice's opening single, Manush's one-shot which sent Sam to third, and Cronin's foul fly to left, Goslin being unable to head off the run after a long chase for the looper.

Brown Starts Browns With Costly Error.

Brown started his own downfall in the next frame when, after gathering up Burns' bunt, he pegged to right field, letting the runner carry on all the way to third. It looked like he might pull out of the hole when Bluege held the runner on third while throwing out the next two, but Gray, Schulte and Melillo singled and Goslin doubled before Hadley could get in action and turn in the third out. The Browns got but one man on base thereafter, Gray walking with one gone in the seventh, but the damage had been done before Brown retired.

The Nationals made threatening gestures in the eighth, but nothing came of them, and scored one useless run in the ninth. Bluege opened round 8 with a single and, after Spencer flied out, Hargrave hit for Hadley. He hoisted to McNeely. Myer's Texas league double to left sent Bluege to third, but both were left when Sam Rice rolled to Melillo. The run was coined in the final canto on Manush's opening triple and Cronin's long fly. Later Kuhel beat out a bunt, but he died at first when Melillo hustled to short center to fasten himself on the end of Bluege's looper.

TRIBE OPENS SET HERE TODAY

Hudlin, Crowder Due to Pitch; Bolton Goes to Orioles.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

ROGER PECKINPAUGH and his Cleveland Indians open a four-game series with the Nationals this afternoon and Manager Walter Johnson has hopes that this set will net a few victories. He is quite discouraged over the manner in which his team has slumped in all departments recently, but as the Nats have won eight out of ten from the Tribe so far this season, is confident that they will make a good showing during the next four days.

Willis Hudlin is expected to do the flinging for the Indians this afternoon, while General Alvin Crowder will draw the Washington box assignment. Crowder performed miserably his last time out, but promises better things today.

This Cleveland series ends the Western invasion of the Capital and fans are showing considerable interest in the set which follows—that with the league-leading Athletics, which calls for single games here Saturday and Sunday and a doubleheader in the Quaker City on Monday. Following this one-day hop to Shibe Park, the Johnsons return home and meet the Boston Red Sox, before making their third and final swing through the wild and woolly West.

St. Louis batters certainly have been unkind to Washington pitchers this season. In the fifteen games played between the two teams, Fred Marbery, General Crowder and Lloyd Brown have been the only starters able to go the route, each having lasted one complete game.

In response to a long-distance telephone call for help received by President Clark Griffith of the Nats yesterday morning, Catcher Cliff Bolton was hustled to Baltimore. Ed Kenna, former Nat, who has been doing

STRICKLER AND BARRY PROMISE BATTLE AT FORT TONIGHT

HeadlineBout Declared a 'Natural'

Boxer vs. Slugger to Swap Punches in 10-Rounder..

5 Other Bouts Make Up 34-Round Card at Ft. Washington.

THIRTY-FOUR rounds of boxing topped off by what the boys term a "natural" await local fistic lovers tonight in the ring at Fort Washington, Md. The piece de resistance is the Reds Barry-Billy Strickler melee, scheduled to go ten rounds, or less, which the dyed-in-the-wool have keenly been anticipating since Strickler hurled a defi to the fast-stepping Barry two weeks ago. Action in the first of the six bouts carded will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

The main event brings together a speedy, light-hitting boxer and a durable, willing slugger, whose padded greetings should resound in the extremes of the arena. Barry is the boxer, and a crafty one despite his 17 years, while Strickler is the slugger, the rough, tough mauler who fights hardest when the going is hardest.

Barry Holds Two Decisions Over Strickler.

Twice before these two have battled with each bout resulting in a decision for Barry. But as their last meeting occurred more than a year ago and each has improved in the interim, rival supporters are viewing tonight's encounter with an equal degree of confidence. This, of course, goes for the fighters themselves.

Barry in a year's time has fought many more bouts than Strickler, and on paper, at least, holds the edge. He has been favored in some wagering at odds of 7 to 5. Reds, expertly handled by the wily Patsy Donovan, has learned practically all of the fine points of the game. In his most recent appearance he flashed big-league boxing in defeating Billy Schwartz, of Alexandria.

Strickler obtained this shot at Barry more or less on the strength of his fine showing two weeks ago against Joe Finazzo, of Baltimore. The former Virginia farmer boy, the recipient of a Bronx cheer when he entered the ring, gave the rugged Baltimore Italian a sound lacing to win hearty applause at the finish.

Strickler Out for K. O. Victory.

Nothing but a knockout victory will satisfy Strickler's craving for revenge for the beatings handed him at Hagerstown in 1930. Billy claims he was not in the best of physical condition on those occasions, but that he is fully prepared this time. As for balancing Barry's recognized superiority in boxing, Billy must depend on a chance to trade wallops. It is generally conceded by close observers that Strickler is more capable of withstanding punishment, this in spite of the fact that Barry holds a weight advantage. Strickler will scale about 166, and Barry, 175.

As an added incentive, the mythical District light-heavyweight title looms before the boys' eyes, and though prize fighting is not legal in the District it will sound nice to be called champion. At present there is no dispute to Barry's claim to the honor.

Billy Schwartz will return to action in the eight-round semifinal in which he will meet Gus Edwards, of Baltimore, of whom local fans have seen little. Edwards scored a knockout over Walter McFeely, former Georgetown University star, in 1928.

One substitution in the card previously announced will bring K. O. Riley, Mohawk Club welterweight, against Harry Goldsby, Third Corps area champion, in a four-round bout, replacing the Henry Irving-Jake Friedman clash. Friedman, a member of the Maryland National Guard, has been called away to camp.

A pair of veteran lightweights, Sammy Hogan and Sailor Oden, will clash in another of the warm-up affairs. These two, while not old in years, have been dealing in leather for about seven years. Billy Hoe, Mohawk Club lightweight, will mix with Soldier Clark, of the fort, and Young Grove, brother of Kid Grove, will engage Jimmy Reed, former Boys Club amateur.

Tickets are procurable at Cornell's Lunch and Vic's Sport Store. Free boat transportation is offered on a Government steamer which departs from Washington Barracks Wharf at 7 p. m.

WASHINGTON A. C. WINS.

Special to The Washington Post.

Easton, Md., July 26.—The Washington Athletic Club, of Washington, D. C., defeate the Tilgham Club at Federal Park by a score of 12 to 7. Mister started for Tilghman but was knocked out of the box in the first inning. Washington scored six runs off him. Richardson relieved him and pitched fine ball and with good support would have won his game.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

JOHN PAUL JONES, the "citizen of the world," as he termed himself, was really named John Paul. He took the last name in order to become legal beneficiary of a legacy of a deceased brother. Although hampered by continual political prejudices, Jones made an enviable record fighting the British for America. For his services Congress elevated him to the rank of commodore. Preceding his service with America he was master of several ships in the British merchant marine.

Jones fought for his third nation when he served in the French navy as a volunteer on the Triomphant, the flagship of the Marquis de Vaudreuil. This was during the closing years of the Revolution. When in 1785 the Czarina of Russia applied to King Louis of France for the services of a French admiral, Jones was appointed. A fifth commission, that of admiral, was offered him by the Swedish government. Jones refused this, as well as another offer from the American Government.

At first glance a penguin feeding its young looks as though the parent was in the act of tearing off the baby's head. In reality the little one is just reaching inside its parent's beak to partake of a dainty morsel of small shrimp. In this respect the penguin is unusual, for all other birds put their beaks inside the little birds' mouths when feeding.

Any reader wanting further proof of anything depicted here should address the author, care of The Washington Post and inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply.

CO-FEATURES PROMISE ACTION

McVey-Edwards and Sarko-Brown Top Mid-City Card.

A FURIOUS slugging exchange between two willing and capable colored middleweights may literally "steal" the show Wednesday night, when Mid-City arena unravels its 35-round fistic performance at Laurel, Md. Mixing in this promising six-period shuffle are Billy Edwards, Washington, and Jack McVey, nationally known New Yorker.

In Edwards, McVey encounters a terrific puncher who will be shooting for a knockout. In recent gymnasium workouts Billy has connected impressively with both hands and has rocked several sparring partners to their heels with robust clouts.

Sarko Promises Brown A Battle.

Scheduled to check in here today, McVey winds up training at Angy Gerrin's gymnasium, back of 1731 K street, this afternoon. Between 3 and 5 o'clock he is to square off against several selected sparmates, and also will participate in bag-punching and shadow boxing.

Advance word from New York has it that Mike Sarko, Buster Brown's opponent in the ten-round coheadliner, is in fettle for a rousing battle with the Baltimore boy. The New York State National Guard champion has fought himself into top stride of late and anticipates victory.

A special section for Edwards' colored supporters has been arranged in the new arena and choice seats for these enthusiasts will be included in the advance ticket sale which opens shortly after the noon hour today. Tickets are being handled at Goldie Ahearn's, 500 Ninth street northwest; Vic Sport Shop, 716 Ninth street northwest; Curb Lunch, 714 H street northwest, and Spalding's, 1338 G street northwest.

DIXIE PIGS WIN UNLIMITED TITLE PLAY-OFF SERIES OPENER

Saks Tossers Are Beaten, 10 to 2

Pigs Hit Mannix for Three-Run Lead in First Frame.

Second of 3-Game Set to Be Played Next Sunday.

RUNNING true to form, the Dixie Pigs captured the first of a three game series to decide the unlimited title of the Capital City League by downing the Saks Clothiers 10-2, before a crowd of approximately 1,000 fans in the University of Maryland Stadium yesterday.

The winners jumped on Charley Mannix for three runs in the first inning, five hits and a walk accounting for the runs. Saks scored in the third when Sebastian singled, advanced to second as Luckett drew a free pass and scored on Hook's slashing single to centerfield. The Clothiers followed this up with another tally, their final, in the fourth frame when Bernie Jones walked and was safe at second when Radtke fumbled Yingling's roller, coming home a few minutes later when Burch singled.

Pigs Clinch Game
In Seventh.

Starting in their half of the fourth when they counted a single tally, the Pigs gradually piled up run after run until the seventh frame when they scored the tenth and final marker. Mannix was wild and ineffective and the winners handled his offerings in a familiar fashion, but the Notre Dame star was not withdrawn from the box. "Lefty" Jones who twirled for the Dixies had the Clothiers at bay most of the time, but on two occasions he was forced to clamp down on his opponents to squeeze out of difficult situations. Jones held Saks to eight well scattered blows.

Despite the apparent looseness of the game, several sparkling fielding plays were turned in by members of both teams. On one occasion "Huck" Stahl robbed Sammy Hook of a two-base hit when he raced far over in back of second base to trap a hot grounder, too late to catch the runner at first. Bernie Jones, first baseman, robbed "Lefty" Jones of a hit when he made a diving catch of a stinging line-drive that was headed for right field and labeled for two bases. "Chubby" Joseph, in center field for the winners, also turned in some neat catches, making five during the course of the game.

Burch Has Good And Ill Luck.

Burch, Clothier second sacker, had a lucky break and a tough break come his way within the space of a few seconds. In the third inning Burch hit what appeared to be a single to left field, but the ball bounced over "Eggie" Watts' head and went for a triple. Burch, however, attempted to stretch the blow into a home-run and was nipped at the plate when Stahl made a perfect relay to the plate on Watts' return.

The second game of the series will be played next Sunday at 3 p. m. on the South Ellipse Diamond with the Clothiers as the home team. The winner of the series will meet the Takoma Tigers, winners of the Montgomery County series, for the Metropolitan championship of the Capital City League.

ROSS BEATEN BY FUSSELL JUNIORS

Victors Stay in Section B Pennant; Jewelers Win.

THE Fussell-Young Team retained its mathematical chance of copping the bunting in section 8, junior class of the Capital City League, by downing the Ross Jewelers, 6-4, in a well-played game on the Monument Grounds yesterday. The victory advances the ice cream manufacturers to within a game of the league-leading Stewart Pharmacy Nine which idled.

In section A, the Schwartz Jewelers, already champions of this section, added another victory to their list by dubbing the Dor-A Tossers, 13-2, in a loosely contested fray. Cecil Hale held the losers to seven well scattered blows. The Jewelers collected a total of 19. Owings and B. Bowers led the losers at bat, while the Nau brothers were best for the Jewelers.

Dave Kaplan held the Ross sluggers to five paltry hits, two of which were obtained by Bill Burke. Standt, Ross twirler, was hit hard, but managed to tighten up with men on the pathways. Simons drove out two home runs to aid the winning cause.

UNION ENGINEERS WIN.

The Union Engineers won the second of a three-game series with the Forestville A. C. yesterday, downing the latter by an 8 to 3 score. The Engineers want more games, especially one with Ballston. Manager H. B. Stover can be reached at Lincoln 8131.

HOW IT BEGAN

STICK-IN-THE-MUD

IN EARLY COLONIAL DAYS THERE LIVED IN MASSACHUSETTS A PETTY, BUT CONCEITED CHIEF NAMED WABANOWI OR STICK-IN-THE-MUD, WHOSE NAME BECAME A FRIENDLY BY-WORD AMONG THE COLONISTS AND HAS BEEN HANDED DOWN TO US AS A WORD FOR SELF-IMPORTANT PEOPLE.

COUPLING GUESTS

IN THE AGE OF CHIVALRY IT WAS THE CUSTOM TO PAIR KNIGHTS AND LADIES AT DINNERS, EACH COUPLE HAVING ONE CUP AND ONE PLATE TO USE BECAUSE THESE ARTICLES WERE SCARCE AND COSTLY. THAT'S HOW THE IDEA OF COUPLING DINNER GUESTS AROSE.

THE JIMSON WEED

WHEN JAMESTOWN, VIRGINIA, WAS BURNED IN 1670 AS A PROTEST AGAINST GOVERNOR BERKELEY, A WHITE FLOWER STREAKED WITH LAVENDER SPRANG UP AND COVERED THE RUINS. NOTHING LIKE IT HAD EVER GROWN THERE BEFORE. IT WAS FIRST CALLED THE JAMESTOWN WEED, WHICH WAS LATER CORRUPTED INTO JIMSON WEED.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THE ADVANTAGES OF COOKING.

THERE is need for a few facts and opinions on the advantages and disadvantages of cooking. Much can be said for it and but little against it. However, the raw food faddists are so willing to tell about their aberration that they succeed in confusing some people. It would seem that the universality of the custom would be the only argument needed. In spite of the trouble and expense, cooking is the custom in every level of society except here and there among the very lowest savages. Those not much higher than wild beasts eat much of their foods raw though even they cook some of them.

Cooking is a requisite for safety among those who live in communities. The eaters of raw food expose themselves unnecessarily to infestation with worms and other parasites, and to infection with typhoid and a number of other diseases. Man tried to hold on to raw milk for a long time after he had given up attempts to eat other foods raw, but finally he was compelled to go to milk that was treated by heat. He is still clinging to the custom of drinking raw water, but city people are now using water that is treated in some way.

Cooking increases digestibility. It is possible to digest raw starch, even laundry starch, but digestibility of all starchy foods is increased by cooking. Cooking makes it far more easily changed into sugar, absorbed into the blood, and used by the tissues.

Cooking increases the digestibility of most albumins and possibly of all—properly done. Raw egg is less easily digested than is cooked egg. Cooking meat makes it more easily digested, as a rule. However, there are methods of cooking that may embarrass digestion. For instance, when cabbage is cooked too long and too hard a part of one of its albumin constituent is broken up and its sulphur is liberated. This causes the vegetable to turn dark and to have a rank taste and color. Its digestibility is decreased. This fact is an argument against improper cooking, and that is all.

If it be argued that boiling milk until a thick, tenacious scum forms on the surface decreases its digestibility, the answer is that if any harm is done it is because the cooking was overdone.

When we come to the fatty ingredients of foods the argument for cooking is not so good. It makes fats safer, but it may not increase digestibility. Most people recognize the greater safety of butter made from pasteurized milk, and some are afraid to eat raw butter, but cold butter is generally held to be more digestible than the melted article." Subjecting fats to high temperatures generally lessens digestibility.

Cooking improves palatability. This statement gets us on unsatisfactory ground. The tastes of people differ and there are no scientific standards of measurements.

EGGS RAW OR COOKED.

M. F. A. writes: Which contains the more nourishment, the yolk or the white of eggs? In eating them raw is it better to eat both or only the yolk? Which way are they most easily digested?

REPLY.

The white contains albumins and practically nothing else; the yellow contains albumins, fats, carbohydrates, minerals and vitamins. The relative nutritional values depend on what one needs. The relative harmfulness depends on what harms. If a person is harmed by egg protein, the whites should be especially avoided. If he is in need of egg vitamans he should eat the yellows. And so on, through several variations. The same considerations apply to digestibility. As a rule, one should eat all of the egg—except the shell. And some people need to eat the shells, ground.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

M. T. writes:

1. What is the cause of high blood pressure?

2. Can a person with a perfect heart, lungs and kidneys have it? If so, what is the cause?

REPLY.

1. Among the causes are worry, anxiety, violent emotion, heart disease, kidney disease, lead poisoning.

2. Yes. See list above.

DOPE USERS.

Mrs. K. writes: Can one pick out persons using dope by certain symptoms?

REPLY.

The best answer is—No. Many people indulge in guesses on this subject and some are right.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK IS AIDED BY BUYING

Week's Trade Shows Demand Is Reviving; Foreign News Remains Handicap.

New York, July 26 (A.P.).—Viewed in retrospect, domestic business developments of the past week compose themselves into a somewhat brighter scene.

At the same time, the European situation remains disquieting. Furthermore, fairly general acceptance in Wall street of the view that the United States Steel Corporation will reduce its dividends next week, and probably consider wage reductions later on, has tended to destroy lingering illusions that recovery is to be accomplished by any sudden turn of a corner.

In considering the business reports of the past week, it must be acknowledged that changes have been slight, and inadequate to bear any conclusion that the bottom of the summer slump has been reached. Nevertheless, there have been a few changes for the better, and further recessions have in some instances been less than the normal seasonal trend had foreshadowed.

Demand Shows Revival.

The reviving demand for certain essential lines of consumers' goods has lent new vigor to preparations for the fall trade. This is particularly notable in woolen textiles. At no time in the past three years has activity in the wool trade equaled the current movement, Duns reports. There has been some let-up in activity at cotton mills, but production is still larger than it was a year ago at this time. Shoe manufacturers are maintaining their large output, with the shoe trade vying with wool for the position of most favored industry. The furniture manufacturing industry is still wallowing in depression, but shows a little more vitality.

Among the heavier lines, steel remains slumberous. Automobile and railroad buying of steel products has quieted further, and the dearth of new pipeline projects is being felt. At the start of the week both Iron Age and Steel estimated production at 30 per cent of capacity, the lowest level yet touched in this depression. Later in the week, however, there was some minor pickup in the Youngstown area and in some U. S. Steel's plants. The steel trade looks for moderate improvement later in the year, but expects little immediate change.

Commodity prices have, in the main, tended to stiffen a little during the week. With huge unused stocks still existing in several lines, such as wheat and copper, the commodity situation remains one of the most trying. The petroleum industry, however, appears at last to have made real progress toward solving its problem of vast overproduction. Although the Texas Legislature has yet to approve means to stem the torrent of oil from east Texas, the drastic shutdown voluntarily made by the Mid-Continent producers has already had a stiffening effect upon crude prices, and gasoline consumption is still eating into refiners' stocks at a good rate.

Improvement Is Indicated.

Reports from wholesale and retail trade have indicated little important change, but what change appeared was largely toward improvement. Retailers are taking their time about getting in their fall stocks and wholesalers continue to complain of their extreme caution. At the same time, summer clearance sales are in full swing and many retailers will soon have to replenish their shelves.

Opinion varies as to whether good crops and low prices are generally preferable to bad crops and improved prices. At any rate, crop conditions remain largely favorable, and the fact that Sears-Roebuck made the best report of the year for its latest four-month period, showing a dollar volume of only 1 per cent under last year, despite the drastic price cutting, has been pointed to as indicating some pickup in buying from agricultural regions.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, July 26 (A.P.).—New State and municipal financing scheduled for award this week totals $11,118,251, compared with $28,705,205 in this classification last week, and the weekly average of $40,485,562 for the year to date, the bond buyer reports. There are only three offerings of major size listed, $1,000,000 3 1-3 month notes of the City of Springfield, Mass., Monday; $1,753,000 4 per cent State of California Park bonds on Thursday, and $2,000,000 City of Omaha, Nebr., bonds Saturday.

Most of the banking commissioners of the 48 States believe that reserves should be established to provide for possible depreciation in bank bond accounts, Moody's announces in summarizing results of a nation-wide survey. Representatives of 30 banking departments stated that they advocate and encourage the creation of reserves for the specific purposes of providing for contingencies in the investment account, while 12 said they were either formulating or already have in operation plans for systematically writing off depreciation or establishing offsetting reserves.

Net asset value per share of International Superpower Corporation was $33.39 June 30, 1931, as compared with $31.34 December 31 last, an increase of 6.45 per cent, the corporation reports. The June 30 report showed the company fully invested in common stocks of American utilities, having disposed of holdings in Gesfeurel and Hamburg Electric early in 1931.

Studebaker Shows Increased Earning

Net Profits of $1,219,605 for June Quarter Are Reported.

New York, July 26 (A.P.).—Increased net earnings for the June quarter this year over the corresponding period of 1930 were reported today by the Studebaker Corporation.

The report showed that the ratio of net profits to sales was considerably better in the quarter this year, the result of economics. Net profits of the corporation and subsidiary companies, after reserves for Pierce-Arrow minority stockholders' interest, for the June quarter this year were $1,219,605, equal to 56 cents a common share, against $915,274, or 41 cents a share in the like quarter last year.

For the first half net profits were $2,029,354, equal to 91 cents a share on the common, compared with $2,258,702, or $1.03 a share, in the first half of 1930.

BOND PRICES LOWER AT CLOSE OF WEEK

Foreign Financial Affairs Affect Nations' Issues; U. S. Sells Bills.

New York, July 26 (A.P.).—The bond market appeared to be without definite trend most of last week, but a comparison of the closing prices with those of the previous week indicated a gradual irregular decline in domestic corporate issues.

Foreign obligations closed lower, several with net losses of several points. The closing average for 30 representative domestic bonds, consisting of ten issues each of industrial, railroad and public utility companies was 94.9, compared with 95.5 a week earlier. Most of the decline resulted from the action of rail issues whose average was 99.0, against 100.2 at the end of the previous week. The explanation of the action of this latter group was easy to find in the unsatisfactory June earnings reports of the carriers.

Continuing unsettlement in foreign financial affairs was reflected in the issues of various nations. The German obligations received more attention than other foreign issues.

The 5½s and 7s of the national government closed within short range of the 1931 low levels and a number of German industrial issues reached new bottom prices on Saturday. Nevertheless, the trading in this group was much less nervous than during the preceding week, although the volume for both periods was sizable in most of them.

The publication Saturday morning of the report of Sir Otto Niemeyer on his investigation of Brazilian finances was an event which had been awaited for some time, but it produced little immediate effect, as the issues of that nation then were both higher and lower. Brazilian bonds moved lower for the week as a whole with other foreign issues.

Further evidence of the widespread preference for gilt edge short-term issues appeared in the results of the sale on Friday of 91-day noninterest bearing bills by the Treasury Department. The Government sold $51,806,000 of bills at an average price of 99.885. The difference between par and the price received by the Government is the compensation to the buyer of the bills for the use of the money and represents an annual cost of 0.46 per cent to the Government for the money.

Evidence of the highly selective nature of the current demand for bonds appeared in offerings of $28,947,000 of new securities during the week compared with $47,792,000 the previous week and $73,737,000 in the corresponding week last year. A large part of the offerings were short-term issues and all of them were of fairly high credit rating.

CENTER FIXES SCOPE OF MODEL-BUILDING

Boys and Girls May Enroll in Summer Classes at Several Schools.

The midsummer schedule at all model-building centers will begin today, to continue throughout July and August under the supervision of John H. Williams, in charge of model aircraft for the Community Center Department and the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League.

Boys and girls interested in building either model aircraft or model yachts are invited to attend the center nearest their home. After becoming novices and building their first craft, they are further invited to enter the city-wide contests for junior pilot to be held August 8 and 15. These events are preliminary to the 1931 District of Columbia model aircraft tournament, to take place August 31 to September 4, in which junior pilots, pilots, aces and silver aces are eligible to compete.

Model-building centers will be open to all comers on the following days:

Mondays—Buchanan Center, Thirteenth and E streets southeast, 1 to 4 p. m.

Tuesdays—E. V. Brown Center, Connecticut avenue and McKinley street, 1 to 4 p. m.

Wednesdays—Adams Center, Nineteenth and California streets, 1 to 4 p. m.; Park View Center, Warder and Newton streets, 1 to 4 p. m.; Wheatley Center, Montello avenue and Neal street northeast, 1 to 4 p. m.

Thursdays—Adams Center, 1 to 4 p. m.; Burroughs Center, Eighteenth and Monroe streets northeast, 1 to 4 p. m.; Francis Center, Twenty-fourth and N streets, 1 to 4 p. m.; Gordon Center, Wisconsin avenue and Thirty-fifth streets, 9 to 12 a. m.

Fridays—Garnett-Patterson Center, Tenth and U streets, 1 to 4 p. m.; Gordon Center, 9 to 12 a. m.; Macfarland Center, Iowa and Webster avenues, 1 to 4 p. m.; Murch Center, Thirty-sixth and Ellicott streets, 1 to 4 p. m.

A new model building center has just been established at Takoma Park Playground, Sixth and Whittier street northwest, which will be open every Tuesday afternoon, from 1 to 4 o'clock to all boys and girls. The Playground Department of the District of Columbia is cooperating closely with the Community Center Department in fostering the summer activities in model aircraft; and has appointed three assistant playground directors, Otho Williams, Ernest Stout and James Monroe, who are assisting Mr. Williams every day at the model-building centers throughout the city.

Among this week's contests for novice class will be one held next Friday morning at Gordon Center, where an attempt will be made to better the records made last week at Burroughs Center. A contest will likewise be held in the near future at Adams Center.

Bird Baths Are Classed As Mosquito Incubators

Ted Johnson, Post Staff Photographer.

Miss Eleanor Kramer, employed by the United States Public Health Service, is shown here looking for an Aedes triseriatus, a mosquito with a vicious bite, that lays its eggs under leaves in bird baths, fountains and other places.

Public Health Service on Trail of Aedes Triseriatus.

Have you been bitten by the Aedes triseriatus?

What! You don't know what it is? Well, you can't be blamed; it took the United States Public Health Service to explain that the Aedes triseriatus is a mosquito. More than that it is a mosquito with a particularly vicious bite. Yes, it's probably the kind that made you remember the hole in the window screen last night.

The outstanding thing about this little buzzer, outside of the fact that it carries disease and bites like the jab of a needle, is that it can be gotten rid of without much trouble.

Mrs. Aedes triseriatus (yes, that surname is correct) lays her eggs in tree holes and in bird baths under sheltering trees during the winter months. When the rains and warm weather come, the eggs hatch and the little A. t's go out into the world to make life miserable for those seeking a cool breeze on a front porch or in the automobile, to say nothing of a beach or a roof garden.

Not until this summer did the Public Health Service observe that the mosquito was laying its eggs in bird baths of which Washington, being a popular city for the chirpers with its many trees and parks, has many. Bird baths all too often are allowed to fill with leaves forming an inviting nest for the mosquito egg-layer.

While the Public Health Service is carrying on a war against other types of mosquitoes through the use of mosquito-eating fish and other methods, it asks that owners of bird baths keep them free of leaves and debris and drain and flush them once a week. In this way, the mosquito can not complete its life aquatic stage, which is usually eight or ten days, and will be kept from emerging into the world to hunt its victims.

Mosquito warfare may be carried further into the home life of Washington, the Public Health Service suggests, by frequent examination of bottles, cans, tubs, barrels and other receptacles of water. One of the best friends of a mosquito in the city is the small water drain trap at garages, it has been found.

This trap, it is suggested, should be flushed out each week with a hose of about half a cup of kerosene poured into the drain. The Public Health Service believes that if these suggestions are carried out by Washington home owners the District will be rapidly rid of mosquitoes and, at the same time, a helpng hand will be given those who are carrying on mosquito-control activities in outlying sections.

Attempted Assault Alleged by Woman

Sleeper in Park Near Police Station Is Saved by Awakening.

A man was being sought by park police last night after a woman reported he had attempted to assault her in Judiciary Square, directly aacross the street from Metropolitan Police headquarters.

William Rogers and his wife, Daisy, were in Washington on their way home to Jackson, Va., after a visit to their son, who is seriously ill in a Batilmore hospital. The couple said they were short of funds and decided to sleep in the park.

Mrs. Rogers told police she awoke to find a colored man bending over her. She screamed, awakening her husband, and the man fled, the couple told police. Two young men, who also sought the park as a place of refuge, reported to police that someone stole their traveling bag while they were asleep. The men are Frank Biddle, of Youngstown, and Jerry Jennings, of Cleveland, Ohio.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

COOLING THE AMERICAN HOME.

THE time is coming, boys and girls, when people will close the windows on a hot July day to keep cool. During an August sizzler they will stay in the kitchen to avoid the heat. An invitation to go to the seashore during the hottest spell of summer will bring the response: "Why, I wouldn't think of leaving the apartment during a record heat wave like this!"

* * * *

Home cooling systems are being rapidly perfected. Already for a price a home owner may install the necessary gadgets which will make it possible for him to refrigerate the house, and it is only a matter of time before the average householder will be "turning on the ice" in summer just as he turns on the heat in winter. It's a great age, hot or cold.

* * * *

"Twenty degrees cooler inside!" may soon be the cry of every home owner.

* * * *

NO more hot night of sleeping under sheets. No more leaning out of the window and gasping for air. No more lolling around the house in shirt sleeves. When it seems a little warm Pop will go downstairs to stoke up the ice or rap on the radiator for the janitor to send up an immediate drop of 15 degrees.

* * * *

You will hear Mrs. Wezzleloff declaring, with reference to a certain apartment house, "I wouldn't think of living there if they gave it to me. Whenever there is a terrific hot spell in the summer the rooms are so warm you have to open the windows to keep cool. Fancy that, now!"

* * * *

The test of the up-to-date apartment will be whether or not the tenants can stay in it all summer without remarking: "It's warm, isn't it?"

* * * *

IT is even possible that in the best-equipped homes an entire family may wake up some August morning so thoroughly chilled that it may be necessary to "defrost" it.

* * * *

The drive to make the great American home comfortable in summer is being vigorously pushed. After the perfection of the cooling system will come the Tom Thumb swimming pool to fit any house.

* * * *

Once a man can make his home cool in summer by pressing a button, he will want to extend the illusion by sprinkling beach sand and broken bottles on the apartment floors and installing an artificial sunburn instrument in every room.

* * * *

THEN there will be nothing else to do except put in a line of "hot dogs" and get some interior decorator to give the house an aroma of clamflats.

* * * *

Altogether now, pulleaze!
Away at the beach breezes touch me in vain,
Oh, give me my lovely thatched cottage again—
The ice-cold apartment, the push button which Gave me comfort the moment I turned on the switch!

The naming of a plane the "Justice to Hungary" contains the germ of a great idea. It may usher in an era of planes with a purpose, and with a clear statement of the purpose prominently displayed. How about an American transatlantic plane christened "The No More Loans to Europe?"

If Lindbergh had only thought of it he might have hopped to Paris in a ship bearing the inscription "Fair Play for the American Ham Sandwich."

"Stop!" cried a dejected looking man as the crooner rendered the new song hit: "I Found a Million Dollar Baby in a Five and Ten Cent Store."

"Whatzamattah?" cried the startled singer.

"I'm the fellow that lost her!" barked the stranger, a queer wild look in his eyes.

Gasoline is so cheap this summer that even Scotchmen are leaving the engine running while they make a call.

MR. THEODORE DREISER has obtained an injunction against a moving picture company's production of "An American Tragedy," charging that it is nothing like his novel. In fact, the picture version is so superficial that he doesn't think the director even skimmed through the first 50,000 pages.

A New York restaurant is advertising: "All you can eat for 60 cents." Here is a great chance for some waiter to borrow the Ed Wynn gag and bring in a pair of percherons for the fellow who is so hungry he could eat a horse.

"More People Holders of U. S. Steel Common"—headline. But you'd be surprised how loose the grip is in many cases.

GAS STATION OWNER ARRESTED IN THEFT

Autoist Getting Car Repaired After Collision Charges $750 Robbery.

Albert Hurst, owner of a service station on the Washington-Richmond highway near the Pendaw Hotel; his brother, Frank, and David Payne, of Charlottesville, Va., were arrested early yesterday and charged with grand larceny which evolved from an automobile accident near the station Saturday night between the cars of G. Cruto, who gave his address as the Argentine Embassy, and George Maxwell, of Greenwood, Va.

Maxwell was carrying to his home when the accident occurred two large suit cases, which contained clothing and jewelry valued at $750. As a result of the smash-up it was necessary for Maxwell to drive into the service station of Hurst to have a bent axle repaired. When he left the station in the morning to continue on his way, he gave no thought of looking to see if his bags were in the car. After he drove down the road a way he discovered that they were missing, he asserts.

He obtained a search warrant from Justice of the Peace Harry Shepherd, of Accotink, and drove back to the service station, accompanied by Sheriff George McCann. The bags were discovered inside the station and Sheriff McCann arrested Hurst, as well as the other two men who were there at the time.

All three are being held, on default of $1,000 bond, in the Fairfax County Jail to await the opening of the September term of the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Neither Cruto nor Maxwell suffered any injury in the accident and both agreed to settle their differences out of court.

Shaves With Meat Cleaver.

Moultrie, Ga., July 26 (A.P.).—When Harrison Lumpkin was a boy he could not afford a razor so he used a meat cleaver to shave off the boyish down. He did not like the smell of lye soap, so he learned to get along with rainwater. Now, at 73, he still uses the meat cleaver and rainwater for his weekly shave.

Commission Studies Milk.

Boston, July 26 (U.P.).—A comprehensive study of conditions under which milk sold in Massachusetts is produced has been undertaken by the recess commission of the legislature with the cooperation of the State department of agriculture and public health.

New Supply of "City Keys."

Cleveland, July 26 (U.P.).—Albert I. Cornsweet, secretary to City Manager Daniel E. Morgan, has acquired a new supply of brass "keys to the city" to present distinguished visitors. The city has been without keys since the administration of Mayor Harry L. Davis in 1927.

REYNOLDS FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Veteran Fire Fighter Came to Capital as Lad From Natural Bridge.

Funeral service for Capt. George H. Reynolds, retired member of the District Fire Department, who died Saturday at his home, 329 Seventh street northeast, following a heart attack, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Timothy Hanlon funeral home, 641 H street northeast. Interment will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Capt. Reynolds was 63 years old. He was a native of Natural Bridge, Va., and had been a resident of Washington since his early youth. In 1895 he was appointed to the Fire Department, being first assigned to No. 2 Truck Company. He was later transferred to No. 3 Engine Company, where he served several years. In 1907, while still attached to this company, he was promoted to the rank of captain.

Following his promotion, he was sent to No. 7 Truck Company and after a short period of service there, went to No. 18 Engine Company, where he was retired in 1928. Capt. Reynolds was one of the best known officers in the fire department and for many years was in charge of operations when the Capitol received its annual bath with fire apparatus.

In recognition of his services at these occasions, Capt. Reynolds was presented a flag by Superintendent Woods, then manager of the Capitol Grounds. This was in the Taft administration and on official holidays since then he displayed the flag in front of his home.

The veteran fire fighter was the owner of another relic which he had cherished since the days when all fire fighting was done by volunteer companies.

This relic is a small plate which, before the fire department was organized, was hung on the outside of a person's residence, designating him as a member of the volunteer association. Capt. Reynolds always kept this volunteer tag on display in front of his home.

No immediate members of the fire captain's family survive him. He was unmarried.

Death Ends Life of Mourning.

Slough, England July 26 (A.P.).—For 30 years George W. Milliard's life centered around the grave of his little daughter in St. Mary's Churchyard here. He was a familiarr figure as he trimmed the grass and tended the flowers. When he dropped dead it was amidst the flowers on the green mound.

Clothes Stolen as He Sleeps.

Thomas S. McLendon, of Rosemary, N. C., a transient, reported to police yesterday that a bundle of clothing was stolen from beneath his head as he slept in Judiciary Square.

Forest Fire Siege Ends in Wyoming

While Blazes Die, Menace of Hot, Dry Weather Still Remains.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 26 (A.P.).—A two weeks' siege of forest fires in Wyoming appeared definitely broken today but the situation in all forests remained precarious because of generally continued, hot dry weather. Communication in some sections had been broken by flames but it was believed all fires were under control. Light scattered rains also aided in halting the steadily advancing destruction.

Col. R. L. Esmay, adjutant general of the Wyoming National Guard, was leading a few guardsmen and volunteers in a fight against flames on the west fork of Labonte Creek, 35 miles southwest of Douglas.

The fire was in rocky prairie lands and was not considered serious unless it swept through nearby timber.

Flames that were spreading yesterday on Horse Creek and its tributaries near Shell, in the Big Horn Mountains, were under control today.

Police Asked to Find Man, 60.

A request was made to police yesterday to locate William R. Peters, 60, missing from 464 F street southwest, since Saturday. Edward Anderson, of the F street address, made the appeal.
